

Arab offshore oil control held possible

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press
Arab oil interests could control oil drilling leases off the Southern California coast, an Interior Department official said Friday in Los Angeles.
"There is no specific prohibition against the Arabs bidding on the tracts if they are part of a U.S.-based corporation," Asst. Interior Secretary Royston C. Hughes said in an interview.
Hughes said Arabs are already major stockholders in several U.S. oil firms and several have U.S. subsidiaries.
Any attempt to block Arab interests from bidding on the oil leases might lead to dangerous retribution against U.S. firms in Arab lands or in the North Sea, Hughes warned.

Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, was the first witness at a hearing held by the Department of Interior to mention that Arab control of the oil leases could mean that the oil generated might be shipped out of the United States.
"There is no guarantee that California outer continental shelf oil will not be exported to Japan or elsewhere and in fact there is no equivalent guarantee that a Japanese or even an Arabian-controlled company will not acquire the California outer continental shelf leases."
Hughes was asked if the oil produced off the Southern California coast could be shipped elsewhere. He said, "I don't think we could require that it land in U.S. ports."
Earlier in the hearing, Los Angeles City Atty. Burt Pines called the federal government's Environmental Impact Statement for offshore oil drilling "legally inadequate" and threatened to sue unless it is revised.

"Our view is that a new draft EIS must be entirely redone," Pines testified.
After testifying, Pines said, "I assume they're going to comply with the law and remedy those inadequacies. If they don't, we certainly would be prepared to recommend a law suit."
Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, who preceded Pines to the witness table, also called the report inadequate and said it would be "irresponsible to sell America's publicly owned oil resources" without a comprehensive national energy policy.
Robert Sharp of Santa Barbara, a retired drilling contractor who testified for the Los Angeles city attorney's office, said the 1,300-page EIS devoted too little attention to the prevention of oil well blowouts, such as that which polluted the Santa Barbara Channel in 1969.

The witnesses testified on the second day of the three-day hearing on the Department of Interior's proposal to lease 10 million acres of offshore land for oil drilling, including 1.6 million acres off California.
Pines said an environmental statement is required by law to provide "a rational decision-making process" on environmental matters.
"If they just disregard the requirements of the federal law, I see no other alternative but to go to court and see that the federal government does comply," he said.
Bradley, who appeared on behalf of the Council of Local Governments, said the 41 cities and counties had adopted a three-point resolution which calls for opposi-

Unemployment hits 1941 levels
Ford weighs job-rate action

By RICHARD L. MADDEN
New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — President Ford, described as "concerned" about the sharp increase in unemployment last month, "will keep close watch on the economic situation and will not hesitate to take further action" if the economy worsens more than expected, his spokesman said Friday.
Ron Nessen, the President's press secretary, said Ford met with advisers Friday morning, shortly after the latest unemployment figures were announced, to discuss "a number of steps the President might take."

Unemployment in January was 8.2 per cent, the highest rate since 1941 when World War II ended the Great Depression.
The highest rate of unemployment — 13.4 per cent — was among nonwhites.
Nessen said that any such steps would involve executive action by the President rather than any new legislation, but did not specify what possible steps had been discussed. Presumably they could include such things as releasing funds for construction projects and other federal programs which have been impounded by the administration.

But at the same time, Nessen, reacting to a bipartisan Senate proposal to expand the Public Service Employment Program by one million jobs at a cost of $7.8 billion, said there was concern at the White House "that there not be a panic" by proposing a nearly $8 billion increase in the federal deficit.

Such a move, he said, could increase the load on the nation's capital markets, jeopardize the borrowing needs of the housing industry and "bring back inflation."
The expanded public service jobs program was

Welfare staff
may walk out

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer
Welfare workers at the Long Beach office of the Department of Public Social Services said Friday they may walk off their jobs if the county doesn't soon take steps to protect them against increasing verbal and physical abuse from clients.
Soaring unemployment has swelled the ranks of welfare applicants and clients in the city. And the crowded waiting rooms at the welfare office, combined with the frustrations of red tape, apparently have caused some clients to take their anger out on the workers, it was generally agreed.
Nearly 100 employees of the district office held three lunch-break meetings with officials of the Service Employees International Union to discuss the problem, and it was agreed that the first order of priority was a security guard for the office.
A guard, armed with a holster gun, may not stop every disturbance, said Jeffrey Fisher, a field representative of Local 660 of the union, "but he'll calm things down greatly. People may think twice before teeing off on a worker," he said.
AFTER SOME DISCUSSION, the welfare workers decided to give the county two weeks in which to act. If the welfare department or the county administrative officer doesn't assign a guard to the office by then, they agreed, they would either march on the county administrator at a meeting of the Board of Supervisors, or walk off their jobs.
The workers also suggested that they carry alarm whistles, and that "panic buzzers" be installed in the interviewing booths. It was also recommended that the welfare department be held accountable for the safety of the workers under state and federal laws, and that trespassing signs be posted in areas restricted to employees.
Fisher, in addressing the workers, accused the county of placing savings ahead of safety. The county "would rather see us harassed, abused, threatened and intimidated than pay for a security guard," he declared to nods and words of approval.
THE UNION REPRESENTATIVE later said that a serious physical assault takes place, on the average, about once a month in the Long Beach office. Last Monday alone, he added, there were three assaults in and around the plant.
Welfare officials said they frankly doubted Fisher's figures. "We keep records of reported incidents, and we're not aware of the frequency of one a month," said David Fulbright, a division chief for the department.

Everyone would get something in tax bill

By DON PHILLIPS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rich or poor, every American who pays 1974 taxes will get a check from the federal government this spring or summer if the House Ways and Means Committee's $20.1 billion tax cut bill becomes law.
The maximum check would be $200. But only "middle income" persons — roughly, those with family incomes of $16,000 to $20,000 — would get that maximum.
UPPER income persons would get no more than $80 to $100, while those who pay less than $100 in taxes would get back the full amount they pay.
The working poor, who generally pay no tax, would get payments too: 5 per cent of income up to a maximum payment of $200 at $4,000 of income. Payments would be phased out as income reached $6,000.
On top of these one-shot payments, withholding rates for low and moderate income persons would decrease in the last half of this year because of the

Rebate? Not for Stutz

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, maker of the $41,500 Blackhawk III, disclosed Friday it is not even considering a rebate plan. Its sales are soaring.
First, rock singer Wilson Pickett stopped by the Stutz display at the Greater New York Automobile show and, according to Stutz president James O'Donnell, ordered one on the spot.
He was followed by another man described only as "a quiet, wealthy gentleman."
The two brought total sales of the Stutz to 135 since it was introduced in 1969 after O'Donnell and his associates purchased the rights to the name of the luxury car that a few decades earlier was in a class by itself.

The current Stutz model is equipped with an engine made in the U.S. by General Motors. The chassis is handcrafted in Italy. When reintroduced in 1969, the Stutz was priced at $22,500. It has nearly doubled since due mainly to the increased cost of steel, shipping, labor and "just about

White House calls for Kissinger support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Friday President Ford feels presidential candidates should stop criticizing Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.
Press Secretary Ron Nessen cited a Thursday statement by presidential hopeful Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., that Kissinger should stay home instead of engaging in jet diplomacy.
"In view of the fact Dr. Kissinger is about to embark on negotiations of the greatest importance, the President would hope the secretary would have the support of the American people instead of having to face such criticism by political candidates," Nessen told newsmen.
"THE President has on a number of occasions made clear his support for Dr. Kissinger," Nessen said.
Bentsen has scheduled a news conference for Feb. 17, at which he is expected to declare himself a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.
Kissinger departs Sunday on a Middle East peace-seeking mission.
Nessen declined comment when asked about Charles C. Colson's statements that President Richard M. Nixon considered Kissinger "unstable" and worried whether Vice President Gerald R. Ford could "control" him.
Colson, who was a Nixon aide, was freed Jan. 31 after serving seven months in prison for obstructing justice in the Ellsberg break-in.
Colson said that before Nixon resigned the presidency, he worried whether Ford could get along with the secretary of state.

His 'integrity compromised'
Agnew breaks with partner

CROFTON, Md. (AP) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says he is terminating his contract with Walter J. Dilbeck Jr., an Indiana land speculator, because of the latter's "exploitation" of their business relationship.
But Dilbeck said he was the one who was exploited in the relationship.
In a letter to Dilbeck released to the news media Friday, Agnew said of their dealings: "It is virtually impossible for us to be successful because your desire for publicity has violated the confidentiality of many negotiations in progress and shocked our clients."
Last year, Agnew and Dilbeck signed a four-year contract providing that the former vice president would act as a consultant in exchange for $100,000 a year plus one-third of the profits the pair realized during the first year of the partnership.
But Dilbeck said in a telephone interview: "I haven't received a dime from him and he's taken $75,000 from me. I gave him a free ride. Everybody knew he was broke when I hired him. He got a lot of real connections out of this deal and I got the problems."

Dilbeck said Agnew was well on his way to becoming a multimillionaire.
But Agnew's letter accused Dilbeck of "continued deception and flagrant inaccuracies in your public statements."
"In the beginning, I thought the problem was your inexperience with the news media. But now I must conclude that your exaggerations and outright misstatements of fact were a calculated scheme to promote your image at the expense of my integrity."
"Now I must set the record straight publicly because there is no other remedy."
"You and I both know that we have yet to conclude our first successful transaction in real estate. Rather than the millions of dollars of profits you mention, we have yet to collect together our first dollar," the letter read.

U.S. admits airmen working in S. Viet

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon acknowledged Friday that 17 U.S. airmen were flown to South Vietnam to direct an emergency resupply effort aimed at getting South Vietnamese combat and cargo airplanes, grounded for repairs, back in the air. At the same time, however, the Pentagon denied that the involvement of the 17 enlisted men from Clark Air Base in the Philippines was a violation of the 1973 Paris peace agreement ending U.S. military involvement in Vietnam. At the State Department, spokesman Robert Anderson said the agreement, in permitting one-for-one replacement of spare parts, "envisages" such activities. Pentagon spokesman William Beecher said the planes had been grounded for maintenance and lack of spare parts and that the airmen, assigned to warehouse and supply duties at Clark, were sent to South Vietnam to direct the arrangements for moving the spare parts around the country.

Firms charged with fraud

ATLANTA, Ga. — An Atlanta-based company, North American Acceptance Corp., and two other firms were charged Friday by the Securities and Exchange Commission with fraud in a petition filed in federal court here. James Ling of Dallas, considered at one time the wonder boy of finance for his development of the Ling-Temco-Vought conglomerate, was among those named in the SEC action. The U.S. District Court was asked to prohibit North American, Omega-Alpha Inc., of Dallas, and GCI International Inc., of Marina del Rey, Calif., from selling North American notes or other securities. The SEC said North American had not told the public everything about its so-called thrift notes, which were high-interest promissory notes sold as a means of borrowing money from the public.

Military academy cost

WASHINGTON — A Government Accounting Office study says the nation's three service academies could save an estimated $1.6 million if more civilian faculty members were hired. The report said it cost about $97,000 to educate a cadet at the Air Force Academy—$11,000 more than academy officials had announced. A GAO spokesman said the figure was reached despite the fact that the academies spend only 42 per cent of their money on instructional services, compared with 57 per cent at most colleges and universities. The GAO said the difference between its estimate for educating a cadet and the military's estimate was that it included several additional items, including the cost of moving a cadet.

Town over flu epidemic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Health officials in this Gulf Coast retirement city say the flu epidemic that claimed 49 lives in two months seems to be over. The victims were persons over 65 who already suffered chronic diseases, mainly heart and lung ailments, says Pinellas County Health Director Dr. George Dame. In Atlanta, meanwhile, the national Center for Disease Control reported the number of influenza-related deaths nationwide dropped sharply last week but remained above the epidemic threshold for the fourth consecutive week. For the week ending Feb. 1, the CDC reported 690 flu-related deaths in the 121 major U.S. cities it samples weekly in a flu surveillance program. That is 138 deaths above the "expected number" calculated by the center.

$4.8 million ransom demand for paintings

URBINO, Italy — A $4.8 million ransom has been demanded for the return of three priceless Renaissance paintings stolen from the Urbino ducal palace, a prosecutor said Friday night. One painting is by Raphael and the other two are by Piero della Francesca. There were two demands for ransom for the paintings, stolen Thursday, but prosecutor Savoldelli Pedrocchi said one was considered a hoax. The paintings are priceless and too well known to be sold, so authorities had anticipated a ransom demand. Both ransom requests were made by phone to the mayor of Urbino and to the superintendent of galleries and museums for the Marche region. In the call to the superintendent, a man mentioned details of the paintings and described signs on the back of the masterpieces that only a person in possession of them could know, the prosecutor said. The man told the superintendent the theft had been carried out by "a group of professionals." He said they wanted one billion lire — $1.6 million — for each painting.

Plea for antiquities

LAGOS, Nigeria — Nigeria is putting diplomatic pressure on countries whose museums hold many Nigerian art objects in the hope that some will be returned, according to Saburi Biobaku, chairman of Nigeria's antiquities commission. Nigeria would need about $24 million to buy back her smuggled antiquities from European and American art markets, he said. But because of the sum involved, he said, Nigeria should forgo these objects and instead seek to preserve the ones still in the country. Biobaku said his commission gets an annual federal grant of just over $300,000 for its work. Some 16 carvings depicting Nigeria's Yoruba tribal house fittings, taken several years ago from the Institute of African Studies at Ibadan University in Nigeria's western state, had been recovered from a Museum in Denver.

Soldiers, civilians battle

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Ethiopian soldiers exchanged gunfire with civilians outside Addis Ababa for about an hour early Friday during an apparent roundup of Eritreans, witnesses said. Casualties were not immediately known. Secessionist guerrillas have been battling soldiers in northernmost Eritrea province since last Friday and a reliable diplomatic source estimated the death toll there at "over 1,000." Witnesses said the fighting four to six miles south of Addis Ababa erupted shortly after midnight apparently when Eritreans resisted being arrested and rounded up. The fighting in Eritrea is between government troops and Moslem guerrillas who have been seeking autonomy for the province since 1962. The guerrillas are reported backed by Arab states who oppose the control exercised by the Christian-dominated regime in Addis Ababa over Eritrea's Red Sea coast.

Levi takes oath, vows justice won't be partisan

Combined News Services

Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi said Friday in Washington the Justice Department must "make clear by word and deed that our law is not an instrument for partisan purposes."

Levi committed himself to work toward this goal as he took the oath of office as the nation's 71st attorney general.

President Ford, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, other Cabinet officers and members of Congress attended the brief ceremony at the Justice Department's Great Hall.

Ford said Levi, 63, president of the University of Chicago for the past six years, has a distinguished legal record and "has earned the honor of being the attorney general."

Levi said, "We have lived in a time of change and corrosive skepticism and cynicism concerning the administration of justice."

He continued, "Nothing can more weaken the quality of life or more imperil the realization of the goals we all hold dear than 'our failures' to demonstrate that the law is not a political tool."

He apparently was alluding to the Watergate scandal which brought about the criminal convictions of two former attorneys general.

He said, the law "is not an instrument to be used in ways which are careless of the higher values which are within all of us."

Levi succeeds William B. Saxbe, who was sworn in Monday as ambassador to India.

Blahs

Fat King Momo's reign over the five days of Rio de Janeiro's carnival extravaganza has suffered from the worst case of pre-holiday blahs in years, according to long-time Rio Residents.

But residents of the city and tourism officials continue to predict that the Friday night through Wednesday morning bash of unrestrained dance, song and drink will be as gay as ever.

"Last year you couldn't sleep a wink for a month before carnival with all the little bands playing in the street corners," said one young woman.

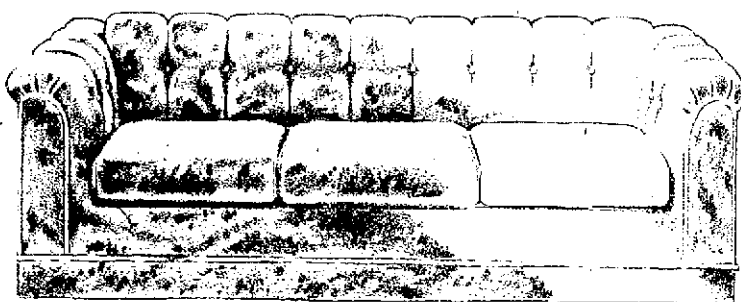

The little traveling and drinking bands, called "street carnivals," have all but disappeared this year. Residents of Rio blame the lack of pre-carnival enthusiasm on the soaring cost of living.

Newport Beach death Statue said murder weapon

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

A brass statuette of a duck apparently was the weapon used to kill a wealthy Newport Beach woman whose body was found in a barrel of cement, police said Friday.

Officers said the cast statuette, one of a pair on the bar in the victim's luxurious home, had traces of blood on it. Also, they said, the shape of the wounds on 50-year-old Nancy Atwater's battered head matched the statuette.

An autopsy by the Los Angeles County coroner's office confirmed the cause of death was four blows to the head, any one of which might have been fatal.

Meanwhile the arraignment of the man arrested in the case, nurse Daniel Bedelian, 40, who cared for Mrs. Atwater's invalid husband, was continued until Thursday.

Judge Selim Franklin, sitting in Harbor Municipal Court in Newport Beach, continued the arraignment after a deputy public defender told him

Bedelian might be represented by a different lawyer.

Bedelian remained in custody under bail of $250,000.

The victim's husband of eight years, retired Wrigley chewing gum executive A.G. Atwater Sr., 87, was moved to Scripps Clinic in La Jolla Friday for medical tests and care.

Bedelian, who emigrated to this country from Lebanon eight years ago, was hired three months ago to look after Atwater from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

The day-shift nurse called police Thursday and told them when he arrived at the home he found Bedelian painting over red blotches on the walls of the woman's bedroom.

Bedelian told him Mrs. Atwater already had left for a scheduled appearance in court to settle an estate, the day nurse told police.

Two convicted of 'equity skimming'

Associated Press

Two Orange County men were convicted Friday of "equity skimming," a scheme in which they defrauded federal home loan programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

It was believed to be the first conviction in the nation since a statute against equity skimming was enacted in 1970.

The defendants, convicted in federal court here, were Charles Berg of Santa Ana and William E. Barker of Fullerton, doing business as Enterprise Investments.

Prosecutors said the men bought a number of houses from people who had let their federally insured loans go into default.

Enterprise Investments was able to buy the houses for as little as $100 to $300.

One hundred refinery workers have returned to work at Douglas Oil Co. in Paramount, ending the last remaining oil strike in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area.

Douglas Oil is a wholly owned subsidiary of Continental Oil Co., and while the union has reached agreement with Continental on wages and other so-called national issues, it's understood that workers at three of the firm's refineries are still striking over local issues.

William Braughton, secretary-treasurer of Local 1-128 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, said the Douglas Oil strikers started back to work following ratification of a contract settlement Thursday.

On the surface

I am the treasurer for the Metropolitan Community Church, 785 Junipero Ave., and we'd like to pave the area in back of our building for a parking lot. Many years ago, the city appropriated money to pave the alley behind our building, and we've been trying to find out if we should go ahead and pave our lot first or wait until the city paves the alley. Can Action Line put us in touch with the right city departments so that we can get this project started? E.W., Long Beach.

The city has never allocated any funds for the paving of that alley, said Tom G. Marchese, Long Beach's city engineer. However, if you will call Marchese at 436-9041, extension 363, he will have a member of his staff help you plan the paving of your parking lot so that it will fit with any future alley improvements. That way, you can start the parking lot project right away. In most cases, the adjoining property owners are required to pay for alley improvements, and before the City Council will approve such a project, a petition must be circulated and signed by a majority of the property owners and a public hearing must be held. The alley improvements can be paid for by the property owners in a lump sum or over a 10-year period at 7 per cent interest. Marchese can arrange to have the petitions, maps and cost breakdowns prepared for you if you want to launch a drive to get the alley paved.

CORRECTION

In the column of Friday, Feb. 7, Action Line erroneously reported that Jack Chapman, owner of Fabric Craft Interiors, 9072 E. Artesia Blvd., Bellflower, had failed to either supply drapes as promised to B.H. Carrillos, or refund her $147 deposit. Chapman, in fact, gave the customer a full refund of the deposit on Thursday, Feb. 6. After attempting to resolve the problem for more than four weeks, and eliciting several promises from Chapman to either deliver the drapes or refund the deposit — promises which were not kept — Action Line wrote an item on the situation explaining it was not able to help. Between the time the item was written and the time it was printed in The Independent, Chapman returned the deposit to B.H. Action Line deeply regrets its error.

Retirement credit

I work for the federal government, and I'd like to know why the time I spent in the Cadet Nurses Corps during World War II doesn't count in terms of my retirement benefits. I understand that service in the Civilian Conservation Corps during the Depression does count. M.J., Huntington Beach.

In most cases, time spent in the Civilian Conservation Corps does not count toward federal retirement primarily for the same reason that service in the Cadet Nurses Corps does not — participants in these programs generally did not contribute to the federal employees' retirement fund, according to a spokesman for the U.S. Civil Service Commission in Washington, D.C. The same thing applies to most of the emergency programs during the Depression or wartime. However, if a CCC participant made arrangements by June 25, 1940, to pay into the retirement fund for the time he spent in the CCC, he may count that period of service toward his retirement, but very few persons paid into the fund, the spokesman said. There is no similar provision for the Cadet Nurses Corps, which is specifically excluded by law from retirement credit.

Deposit

I planned to buy a home in Boise, Idaho from Carolyn Dingeman. I sent her a $1,150 check but no papers were drawn up. Later I was in an auto accident. I told her I could not go ahead with the deal and she sold the home to someone else. I'm on Social Security disability. Can you get part of my money back? V.K.D., Santa Fe Springs.

No. Action Line wrote Ms. Dingeman and was subsequently contacted by her attorney, Howard Manweiler, who said she feels no obligation to return any of your money. He maintained the home stayed vacant four months while they awaited your decision concerning the property and it could have been rented for about $200 a month. Preparing the sales contract cost $100, he said. Manweiler said his client, "is entitled to the reasonable rental value of the property during the period of time it was being held for (you) together with costs expended by her in preparation of the documents."

Haldeman demands Jaworski testimony

By H. F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for H.R. Haldeman Friday demanded that former Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski be summoned to testify in connection with Haldeman's attempt to have his Watergate cover-up conviction overturned.

Attorney John J. Wilson argued, at a Watergate post-trial hearing, that Jaworski should tell what was on tape recordings that former President Richard M. Nixon allowed him to hear.

"It burns me up that lawyers at the White House were circumscribing our access to papers there with such silly precision that we couldn't even take notes — at the same time that prosecutors were given access to tapes," Wilson said.

He called it "a surreptitious arrangement in an effort to exonerate Mr. Nixon."

Haldeman was convicted, along with John D. Ehrlichman, John N. Mitchell and Robert C. Mardian, of conspiring to obstruct justice in the Watergate cover-up. No date has been set for sentencing.

All four men asked U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica either to enter judgments of acquittal or to grant them new trials or both, citing a variety of legal grounds.

Only Ehrlichman was in court on Friday. He told a newsman he was thinking of writing a book "if I can find the time" but that he was not planning on a lecture tour.

Meanwhile, attorneys for convicted Watergate burglar James W. McCord Jr. told the Supreme Court that he has been discriminated against because of the pardon granted Nixon.

"The master goes free, while the servants and agents are jailed," his attorneys said in appealing his conviction on burglary, wiretapping and conspiracy charges. They said the pardon unconstitutional denies him equal protection of the laws.

McCord, who was sentenced to up to five years in prison, has been free on bond since last March 8.

One of the grounds for a new trial cited by Wilson was that of "important new evidence — the Jan. 30 testimony before a House criminal justice subcommittee of Jaworski, and his successor as special prosecutor, Henry S. Ruth.

Jaworski had testified Nixon let him listen to some still-secret tapes that were "highly embarrassing to people in public office."

Jaworski said Nixon was trying to convince him that the tapes were not relevant to the Watergate prosecutions. He testified that after listening to the tapes he, Jaworski, agreed.

"I know some information I would term tremendously juicy," Jaworski told the Congressmen. But he said that disclosing the information would put him in a dilemma because he had given Nixon his word that he would not.

Wilson handed the judge a transcript of Jaworski's testimony and Sirica said he would make a decision later.

Ziegler says Nixon 'regrets his errors'

NEW YORK (AP) — Former White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler says former President Richard Nixon knows the mistakes he made and has many times expressed regrets and anguish about the Watergate scandal.

"He knows his mistakes, and he knows the errors he made, and he knows the judgments that were wrong judgments," Ziegler said in an interview Friday with Robert Pierpoint on the CBS Evening News.

ASKED whether Nixon had expressed regrets, Ziegler answered, "Of course. Many times." He continued:

"Certainly any man, who has been in politics for 25 years and been in public life for 25 years, who's accepted a great deal, who rose to the office of the presidency of the United States through our political process and then left office under the circumstances and under the tragedy that he did, seeing what has happened to the men who worked for him — certainly he expresses regrets and, at times, great anguish."

"And I know one of the things that disheartens me a great deal is when I see people who may have an impression of him or see him only briefly state that he does not have an idea of the events that drove him from office, or not drove him from office so much, but led to his resignation. He does."

The former press secretary, who has served as Nixon's chief spokesman since his resignation last August, described the former chief executive as sensitive, compassionate and analytical.

Ziegler disputed reports that Nixon wanted to reenter public life in some way. "I think the important thing to keep in mind is that he is not planning a comeback," he said.

ASKED how much faith Nixon had had in President Ford's abilities, the one-time press secretary said, "I think the fact that he appointed him as vice president of the United States is indicative of his confidence in him."

Ziegler denied the allegation by former White House aide Charles W. Colson that Nixon had thought Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was unstable. Colson said in an interview Friday that Nixon believed Ford would be unable to control Kissinger.

Panel probing charges of FBI poverty spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Augustus Hawkins said Friday his House equal opportunities subcommittee is looking into reports the FBI hired informants in local antipoverty programs, and may conduct a full-scale inquiry.

The California Democrat said he has asked the Justice Department for the facts, adding he hopes the answer will include details on the FBI's confirmation that it hired a legal aid worker in New Orleans to spy on black activities.

"I certainly do intend to push it, depending on the answer we get from the Justice Department," Hawkins said.

Chairman Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., said the inquiry his House civil liberties subcommittee as already begun on FBI intelligence operations may also get into the area of informers and undercover agents.

Demo panel prepares own energy program

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON—In an effort to shape energy and fiscal alternatives to the administration's proposals, a committee of senior Democratic senators is studying a staff outline of a plan that would assign first priority to reducing unemployment.

The draft plan would defer direct measures to reduce oil imports until unemployment begins to fall. At that time, an additional cent-a-gallon of federal tax would be levied on gasoline, with more one-cent increments to follow as unemployment declines.

Numbered copies of the outline were given to Democratic senators of the ad hoc energy committee at an unannounced meeting Friday morning, and the contents also were reviewed at another meeting of senior staff representatives of standing committees.

One Senate staff assistant, asked if the effort to arrive at a common position was likely to succeed, replied: "It depends what level of detail you want. The more detail you put in, the more disagreement you get. We can probably come up with something, but it might be seen as vague and ambiguous."

heavily goal-oriented but not very specific."

The draft plan takes the view that forcing out oil imports is not urgently needed and that such action should be avoided until the economy turns around and starts to expand.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., expressed the general sentiment when he told the finance committee Friday that the administration's tax increases should be blocked because "they have not told us why the one million barrel per day cut (in imports) is needed this year with our economy already in deep recession."

The administration's fuel tax increase was also opposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who appeared before the committee with Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., in support of a House resolution calling for a rollback of the tariff and a 90-day delay of any other tariffs or quotas on imported oil. The House passed the resolution two days ago.

Kennedy called the administration's tariffs a shotgun attack and said New England would be affected more severely than any other region because it depended on petroleum for most of its energy.

An aide to a prominent Democratic senator said that most Senate Democrats don't believe that immediate reduction of oil imports was urgently needed but nevertheless would not want to endorse a program that might open them to "do nothing" charges by the administration.

Yet, the Democrats were depicted by several sources as agreeing that the economy was the vital issue, and that energy policy should do nothing that might further weaken production and employment. The Democrats contend that this would happen under President Ford's energy program, because it would create a fuel shortage by reducing oil imports.

That was the theme of the draft package shaped by the policy committee staff with considerable help from the staffs of the Senate Interior and Commerce committees. However, the Commerce Committee was also reported to have circulated a two-page energy policy outline of its own.

Burns urges caution in loosening money supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board said Friday that while the board will ease credit to encourage recovery from the recession "we have no intention of permitting an explosion in money and credit."

Burns, testifying before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, disagreed with senators who want the Federal Reserve to expand the money tary supply and ease credit significantly.

"You should realize the Federal Reserve no longer has good options open to it," Burns said.

He said the board can follow its present generally moderate course or "join the inflationists."

Increasing the money supply to a large extent would "send long-term interest rates soaring, unleash a new wave of inflation and wreck all prospects of recovery in this country," Burns said.

"Such a reckless course of action might hold short-term interests rates down for a time, but it would, before long, plunge our economy into deeper trouble," Burns said.

However, Burns disagreed with predictions by the Ford administration's leading economists that the current recession may last well into next year.

He said the recession may be over sooner than expected, pointing to the fact that industrial inventories are being liquidated at a rapid rate.

"That means the declines in economic activity must come to an end and very soon," Burns said.

Burns said he will soon present the Senate and House banking committees with proposed legislation designed to deal swiftly with the kind of problems experienced last year by New York's Franklin National Bank.

The Franklin, in difficulty over foreign investments, was taken over by a federal agency and then sold to another bank.

Oil product demand off, study says

NEW YORK (AP) — Demand for oil products in the United States during 1974 fell for the first time in 32 years, year-end studies show.

According to Chase Manhattan Bank's petroleum newsletter, daily demand for all types of petroleum fell 3.9 per cent from 1973 to an average of 16.7 millions of barrels a day. The American Petroleum Institute, in its year-end report, said demand dropped 3.3 per cent to 16.68 million barrels a day.

Chase economist Gregory Shuttlesworth said the decline in demand was the result of a number of factors: the Arab embargo, unusually warm weather, energy conservation, higher prices, and the slowdown of the economy. The last decline, he said, occurred in 1942 as the country was entering World War II.

Both Chase and API, the chief petroleum industry trade group, said U.S. petroleum production continued to fall during the year. Chase estimated a 3.9 per cent falloff and API a 2.7 per cent decline. Oil imports slipped .7 per cent from 1973 to 6.16 million barrels per day during the year, API said, while Chase estimated the decline at 1.7 per cent to 6.09 million barrels a day. Chase said a drop in imports of refined petroleum products, accounted for nearly all of the import decrease. Both groups said crude oil imports increased.

Demand for gasoline within the country registered the smallest reduction from 1973, with greater savings posted in residual and distillate fuel.

Chase compiles its figures from API, U.S. Bureau of Mines and Federal Energy Administration statistics.

Goldwater Jr. disagrees on Nixon return to politics

By BOB SCHMIDT
Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Congressman Barry Goldwater Jr. said Friday he disagreed sharply with his senator father's suggestion that the Republican Party would welcome Richard Nixon's return to politics.

The Los Angeles Republican, in the capital to attend the GOP State Central Committee convention starting today, said "I happen to blame Richard Nixon for the problems the party had in 1974. Our ranks were devastated, and I blame his conduct in the White House."

Goldwater said he had not seen his father since the Arizona senator told newsmen he had dined with Nixon and suggested that the former president consider returning to public life.

"I DON'T know why he said that," Goldwater Jr. told reporters "I think the majority of the party's members would oppose Nixon's return."

"I also believe that had it not been for Watergate, Houston Flourney would have defeated Jerry Brown in the governor's race."

The 36-year-old California-born congressman sat down with reporters to a lunch of hamburgers and coke and introduced his pretty, eight-months-pregnant wife, Susan.

He said he has been "under some pressure" to announce his candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by Democrat John Tunney, and said he would make up his mind late this summer whether or not to enter the 1976 primary.

"At this point in time I lean away from running," Goldwater said. "I have some seniority in the House, and that gives me some power I wouldn't have in the Senate."

He steadfastly refused to be critical of Tunney, except to say he thought the Riverside Democrat "could be doing a better job."

He was not at all reluctant, however, to criticize Democrats in the House of Representatives.

Asked about organizational "reforms" engineered by Democratic Caucus Chairman Phillip Burton of San Francisco, Goldwater said "Those were not reforms, those were purges."

"The far left has taken over the Democratic caucus and the people will suffer as a result."

He offered as "an example of hypocrisy" the Democratic caucus' decision to ban proxy voting.

"But after the caucus did that," Goldwater said, "every single committee — and for every Republican on a committee there are two Democrats — voted to allow proxy voting."

Citing the economy as the "obvious top problem" facing the Ford Administration, Goldwater said he disagreed with the President's proposal to cut taxes and increase federal spending.

"I think taxes should be cut, but I think spending should be reduced, too," he said. "I don't think a short-term remedy to the economic problem should ignore the long-term effects. And the effects of continued massive deficit spending are going to be disastrous."

Goldwater said he is chairman of the State Central Committee's resolutions committee, and plans to meet with many of the 1,114 delegates as possible.

Assemblymen Dixon Arnett of Redwood City and Robert McLennan of Downey said they would introduce a resolution in Goldwater's committee today in support of a constitutional amendment establishing the initiative and recall process at the federal level.

DEMONSTRATOR Cathy Cade, right foreground with hands on hips, confronts Gov. Brown during his address to the California Newspaper Publisher's Association Friday in San Francisco. Ms. Cade wants a pardon for Inez Garcia who is in prison for the slaying of an alleged rapist.

Brown says 'no' on rapist's killer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Brown Friday rejected demands by supporters of Inez Garcia for a pardon and a women's commission to investigate it and other cases of murder after rape.

As Brown mounted a podium to address nearly 400 California Newspaper Publishers, a young woman began yelling questions. "Why didn't you send a representative to the state building where 39 people were arrested trying to present a petition to you?" demanded Kathy Cade of Berkeley.

"Because I'm here now. I'm here now. Ask what you want," the governor replied.

THE WOMAN, who identified herself as a member of the Free Inez Committee, rattled off demands for a pardon of Mrs. Garcia and a commission of women comprised of the same racial makeup as California's women's prisons.

Mrs. Garcia was convicted of second-degree murder after she admitted in court that she killed a man who she said held her while another man raped her.

The issue was the same one that spurred some 200 persons to demonstrate at the State Office Building about two hours earlier, demanding the convicted woman be freed. More than 30 of them were arrested.

"I don't think it is proper for the governor to pardon before the appeal process is exhausted,"

Brown said, adding that it would be an invasion of judicial prerogative to try to obtain bail for Mrs. Garcia.

Brown indicated that he would not set up a multiracial commission but would try to remedy the problem by instructing members of the women's parole authority. He then asked that he be given two weeks to consider the group's written proposals.

As Ms. Cade and a woman companion were led from the auditorium, Brown said "I'm working at my job doing the best I can but it doesn't take a demonstration to get my attention. I think these women have understandable concern."

At the State Office Building, hearing signs reading "Free Inez" and "Stop Rape," assembled on the McAllister Street front of the building.

STATE police moved against the group after about 60 pushed into the building lobby and were warned by state police that they were trespassing inside the building.

City police arrived with paddy wagons and transported those arrested to the Hall of Justice. The demonstrators, mostly women, did not resist and there was no violence.

Miss Garcia was convicted of second degree murder last October after a Monterey trial. She was accused of seeking out and shooting Miguel Jimenez in Soledad last March. She insisted that Jimenez had helped in the rape assault against her.

Bombers rip news reports

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A group identifying itself as Peoples Unit 3 of the New World Liberation Front said Friday in a message to a Berkeley radio station that it bombed KRON-TV in San Francisco as a way of "exposing the parasites of America and the way they run their system."

In its 6 p.m. news broadcast, KPFA said the NWLF raised objections to the way KRON-TV had reported bombings Monday night in San Jose, San Mateo County and Oakland. The communique also said that 40 persons in the KRON-TV building were not evacuated, although a warning was given five minutes before the bomb exploded.

The NWLF, which claimed responsibility for the three Monday night bombings, said early news reports of the blasts were inaccurate and that a communique it had sent to KPFA had not been reported by KRON, which it described as "an affiliate of NBC which Rockefeller controls."

KPFA said the NWLF communique was not available to KRON-TV and other media at the time of their early evening newscasts.

The latest message to KPFA also cited what it called "the devious and leach nature of the media for the Air Force-corporate pigs ruling class decision to send civilians from Thailand and the Philippines to the Saigon area to deliver spare parts."

The FBI entered the investigation of Thursday night's bombing at KRON-TV, the 22nd terrorist bombing in the San Francisco Bay area in two years.

An FBI spokesman said ruthless internal security and restrictions on police undercover and informer operations has made it increasingly difficult to track down terrorist bombing groups.

The high-intensity bomb exploded in an outside stairwell. It damaged fire doors but caused no injury to 40 persons working in the building at the conclusion of the NBC-affiliate's half-hour 11 p.m. newscast.

A CALLER from the "New World Liberation Front" telephoned the station 5 minutes before the explosion and claimed responsibility.

"All we know of the New World Liberation Front is its name and that it has claimed responsibility for the KRON-TV and other bombings," said Frank Perrone, FBI spokesman here.

A message delivered on Monday to radio station KPFA in Berkeley threatened further bombings of network-affiliated broadcast stations, saying the media is controlled by the corporate capitalist establishment.

The blast at KRON was the fourth bombing or attempted bombing in a week for which the newly identified radical group claimed responsibility.

A Monday night explosion in a San Jose building housing four radio stations and a General Motors finance office caused $100,000 damage. The message to KPFA said GM was the target.

NEW WORLD Liberation Front members also claimed responsibility for a minor blast at an Air Force tracking station near Half Moon Bay on the coast and a bomb intended for a Standard Oil of California Co. asphalt plant in Oakland on Tuesday.

By law, the FBI investigates all bombings in which extremist groups are suspected.

"We have a tough job here," FBI Agent Perrone said. "This new front name could be just a new name for hard core extremists hating back to the Weatherman, or the Weather Underground that followed that."

"The new front could be no more than two or three people, hard core characters. And the smaller and tighter the group, the harder it will be to find out anything about them."

Ban on military for jobs ignored

By ED ZUCKERMAN
Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency must, by federal law, be a civilian.

But on at least two previous occasions, Congress and the White House have ignored the law by permitting military men to shuffle in and out of military life to serve as a temporary civilian in government.

Now, the current head of the FAA, former Air Force Col. Alexander Butterfield is seeking to join the two previous FAA chiefs — Lt. Gen. Elwood Quesada and Gen. William McKee — who headed the agency without loss of military benefits.

Butterfield, the man who blew the whistle on the White House taping system when he testified last year before the Senate Watergate committee, is asking Congress to restore his military pension when he leaves the agency.

Quesada resigned his Air Force commission when President Dwight D. Eisenhower picked him in 1958 to head the FAA. Congress approved special legislation to allow him to return to the Air Force retired list.

McKee wasn't required to resign his Air Force commission to head the agency in the mid-1960s. Instead, Congress waived the requirement that the FAA administrator be a civilian.

Congress has ignored the requirement that civilian posts be limited to civilians on another notable occasion.

Army Gen. Eisenhower resigned in 1962 to serve as president. When he stepped down in 1961, Congress enacted legislation restoring him to the rank of retired general.

Army Chief of Staff William Westmoreland, who served for awhile as top commanding officer in Vietnam, quietly sought passage of special legislation last year that would have permitted him to maintain his military pension rights while serving as governor of South Carolina. The effort became moot when Westmoreland failed to win the Republican Party's nomination to run for the office.

Butterfield, at the time of his Senate confirmation, drew assurance from Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., that he would not lose his pension rights. But, Cotton retired at the end of last year.

Recently, Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., and Sen.

'Skytrain' OKd, U.S. hit for lag

LONDON (UPI) — Plans for a transatlantic "skytrain," with one-way seats costing $141 won final approval Friday from British aviation authorities who criticized their U.S. counterparts for delay in the project.

The Civil Aviation Authority gave the go-ahead to Laker Airways' "walk on-walk off" proposal but said it could not go into effect for another 12 months, or until the market had recovered.

British Airways opposed the idea on the grounds that it could supply virtually the same service at the same cost through advance-booking charter flights.

John Tower, R-Tex., introduced special legislation on Butterfield's behalf.

Besides Butterfield, two other former military men who accepted presidentially appointed government jobs are asking Congress to restore their pension rights.

Astronauts William Anders and Michael Collins both resigned their Air Force commissions when they accepted Nixon administration jobs.

92-year-old fund raiser

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — At a time when most of the country's contemporaries have died or become inactive, there is one 92-year-old New Orleansian who is not only doing his part, but also doing his "thing."

The Rev. Byron J. Krieger, of Redemptorist Parish, is content to finish out his days doing a job which he finds to his liking.

"Retired" from active parish ministry, Father Krieger spends his time raising funds for Holy Redeemer College at La-combe, La., and the Redemptorist junior seminary which he helped establish in 1959.

Born in New Orleans Dec. 11, 1882, Father Krieger was ordained in 1909 and has served in many areas of the country. Twice he has been assigned to his home city, first in 1911-1920 and continuously since 1957.

His knowledge of New Orleans and the Redemptorist Fathers' work have been reflected in two works he authored, "75 Years of Service," written for the order's 75th anniversary and "Corner Stone," done for the Redemptorists' centennial in the city.

Commentary Titles of clergymen

By MARK CLUTTER

What do you call a preacher? There are so many titles in the many churches. And often the titles are misused by both clergy and laity.

For example, Donald R. Behm as rector of All Saints Episcopal Church last week was "The Rev." — This week he is the archdeacon of the Diocese of Los Angeles, so his title now is "The Venerable" or "The Ven." — "Venerable" as a secular adjective means wise and elderly. He's not that old. But is he still called "Father?"

The purists used to hold that "the" should always accompany "Rev." "The Rev. James Jackson" or "the Rev. Mr. Jackson." A racial distinction was made in the South not long ago. A black pastor did not rate "the" or "Mr."

Clergymen are not so fussy any more, but many do not like "the Rev." or "Rev." with last name only. The prefer Dr. or Mr. or Father or Pastor, whichever is correct.

"Pastor" seems to be used more and more frequently.

Not all churches use clerical titles. The Church of Christ (not to be confused with the United Church of Christ) calls its ministers Mr. or Dr. But the church does have elders and deacons.

The Society of Friends (Quakers) has no clergy. It does, however, have ministers.

Usage is mixed in some churches. Many pastors in the Christian Church don't call themselves "Rev." Traditionally the title "Brother" was often used. Most Episcopal priests are called "Father." A few, however, insist on Dr. or Mr.

Ordinary titles may have quite different meanings in different churches. The Mormons, for example, have no clergy. However, every Mormon man in good standing is a priest. A bishop is more like the pastor of a local church. There are presidents, elders and many other titles. It sounds rather confusing to most "Gentiles." Actually is a clear and practical form of government.

would appreciate getting explanations of the titles of various churches.

Is there a trend toward a less formal attitude toward the clergy? Perhaps. It seems unlikely that the Rev. Dr. Billy Graham would be offended if a stranger called him Billy.

A TRAGEDY of Christianity is the split in the Lutheran Church — Missouri Synod.

The Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen has been elected president of Concordia Seminary in Exile — "Seminex" — in St. Louis. Last October Dr. Tietjen was fired as president of Concordia Seminary, also in St. Louis, after a heresy trial in which he was found guilty of false doctrine and malfeasance in office.

Students and faculty were outraged. The Board of Control fired 48 faculty and staff members. The Seminary in Exile came into being.

Many Christians do not agree with the harsh conviction. The Christian Century magazine chose Dr. Tietjen as one of 20 outstanding Christian leaders of the year. The magazine described him as a "conservative, confessional high-church Lutheran . . . (who) inspires fellow exiles, and those who observe them, with a vision of evangelical faithfulness." Very likely, similar words could be used correctly about some of his enemies.

How do Christians come to such a disaster? It has happened again and again in history — the split of the Roman and Eastern Orthodox, the trouble Luther started by nailing a little manuscript to a church door, the Inquisition, the Thirty Years War, the Puritan Revolution and many other tragedies.

All these things were started by Christian gentlemen who thought they understood precisely the will of God. Gentlemen, yes, but men not given to smiling or laughing, men incapable of seeking understanding and peace with those who opposed them.

Arrogance, traditionally called the chief sin, has also been called the sin of priests.

SPEAKING of titles again, please don't call the newspaperman who puts these pages together "The Religion Editor."

The proper title is "The Religion Editor."

We do, of course, have religious editors. One is an elder in his church. He handles news about high-jackings and earthquakes and political corruption.

The Religion Editor handles news about religion.

He may have a religion of his own, but it isn't necessary. He should be a very secular person during working hours. He

Water said found on Jupiter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers have discovered evidence of water in the atmosphere of giant Jupiter, a major advancement in learning whether the solar system's largest planet could support some form of life.

University of Arizona scientists detected the water with instruments carried high into the earth's atmosphere aboard a C141 Starlifter.

"There is no doubt water is there," Dr. Harold P. Larson of the University of Arizona said Friday in a telephone interview.

In a report to be published this spring, scientists said "The detection of water on Jupiter fills a very critical gap in our understanding of the chemistry of the solar system. This is the first oxygen-bearing molecule identified in the outer planets."

Earlier observations of Jupiter, some dating back to the early 1930s, have detected evidence of chemicals in the planet's atmosphere that are believed to have served on Earth as the precursors of life.

should have the ability to hear and understand the programs and philosophies of very different, often conflicting churches.

It is a job in which it is easy to like people. Almost all the news sources have charm and many have charisma. Mostly they are trying to do good in the world.

But a background in police reporting and political reporting is a good preparation for religion reporting. It gives the man a proper measure of cynicism. Not all church people are good and loving and idealistic and mindful of the rights of others all the time. Anything that happens in Congress can happen in church.

It is intellectually exciting. A religion editor should have a background in theology, history, psychology and sociology. Few working newsmen have all that. But many pastors do. The academic attainments of some are rather amazing. And all of them seven days a week are learning about human nature.

The Religion Editor should be something of a commentator. Ideally his opinions should be always right and fair. Certainly they will sometimes be wrong or at least open to debate.

Dr. Samuel Johnson once remarked in words to this effect: "Of course, every man has freedom of speech. He can say whatever he wants to. And every other man has a right to knock him down for it."

Please feel free to knock the Religion Editor down — preferably with words.

Tradition of dissension

Diocese OKs women priests

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

Los Angeles delegates to next year's Episcopal national convention in Minneapolis, elected last weekend during a diocesan meeting at the L.A. Hilton Hotel and St. Paul's Cathedral, could find themselves in an odd position.

The six-county Southern California diocese then adopted after long and sometimes heated debate a resolution recommending to national that women be ordained priests and bishops. No other U.S. diocese has yet taken such a step, and the question is certain to evoke much impassioned discussion.

The possibly strained Southern California delegation to the U.S. sessions was elected after seven ballots late last Saturday. At least two Angelenos going to the Upper Midwest in midwinter 1976, a chilling prospect in itself, are on record as strongly opposing female ordination. Not committed by the 343 local votes favoring female ordination, or by the 292 in opposition, delegates must express their respective consciences.

Some group members undoubtedly will be working for the "cause," supported and sustained by the action of their home diocese — which will be well known to others attending. Meanwhile, the "loyal opposition" within the Southern delegation presumably will be hard at work seeking to convince national delegates not to adopt resolutions needed to bring about this fundamental change.

A longtime observer of Episcopalianism, I, as an alternate delegate from St. Luke's parish, watched these actions with a calm certainty that all will be well in the end. Regardless of what happens.

In other years, times and places, there have been inhouse differences over the merits of High churchmanship vs. the Low, whatever that was; whether the social gospel or evangelism should prevail and the Book of Common Prayer.

I'm not referring to the still-ongoing 1978 Prayer Book vs. Trial Liturgy controversy, by the way. Actually the observation harks back to Elizabethan days when an English-language prayer book actually caused bloodshed in English churches, an outcome modern civilization hopefully has ruled out. Somehow I find this a comforting thought when contemporary churchly passions run full tilt.

Other debatable questions on the agenda last week might have warranted headlines had not the ordination question taken precedence. For instance:

Passed after extended debate — and the beating down of a substitute motion — was a rather mild (in my opinion) resolution touching on abortion. Commended by it is a diocesan advisory commission that prepared a study of abortion; it only asked parishes or individuals to "give thoughtful Christian attention" to the lauded study material.

Further illuminating the church's occasional quirkiness — I think — were the votes given two other unrelated measures. By a hairsbreadth 206-201 standing count, delegates turned down a resolution that would have called upon President Ford to offer full and unconditional amnesty to Vietnam era draft resisters and G.I. deserters. Not too many years past, such a resolution probably would have gone down to resounding defeat.

An earlier resolution asking only that self-sustaining parishes be allowed free use of the 1928 Book of Common Prayer instead of the Trial Liturgy also met defeat. Few causes have gained stauncher defenders than the old book, which probably will be supplanted completely in 1979 by the "upstart" trial liturgy.

Seemingly there was further inconsistency in an innocuous resolution killed after an unexpected debate. Delegates who refused free use of the old Prayer Book voted (and rightly, I think) in favor of a free press by refraining from moving against pornographic publications.

Bishop Robert C. Ruck's annual address undoubtedly will provoke general discussions during the coming year. Did he, or did he not, suggest that Christianity should retreat into an oldstyle evangelistic shell?

Ash Wednesday

"Remember, O man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return."

On Wednesday millions will kneel at the altar rail while pastors intone these words and mark on each forehead the sign of the Cross in ashes made from the palms of last year's Palm Sunday.

The little ceremony marks the beginning of Lent.

Roman Catholics, Anglicans and Lutherans have the ritual. Most Protestants do not.

Traditionally Ash Wednesday and Good Friday are days of total fast. Few Christians today practice such austerity. Lent, except for Sundays, is supposed to be a time of self-denial.

Ash Wednesday began in the Middle Ages as an occasion of public repentance for notorious sinners. But all men are sinners, so it became a time for communal repentance.

In the Eastern Orthodox churches the fasting and austerity of Lent is so intense that the devout sometimes become ill at the Easter feast. Their bodies have lost the habit of ample dining.

Most Protestants observe the season with increased worship and religious instruction. A few denominations do not observe Lent or Easter, saying that every Lord's Day is a celebration of the Risen Christ.

How to turn off criticism

Anybody ever take a verbal crack at you? Sure, they have. Each of us has had his turn on the receiving end of criticism. And it can really hurt too. So, one thing is sure, we must learn to handle criticism.

And there is a scientific way to do just that. I call this method the scientific objective approach. It consists of asking yourself, when someone has said something about you, the following four questions: (1) Is it true or false? (2) Who said it? (3) Is his opinion of any value? (4) Is he an honest or prejudiced critic?

A man once came to me who was very upset by remarks made by a former friend who was now full of hate and anger. "Do you know what that guy does?" he demanded. "He goes around calling me a skunk, a dirty skunk! What do you think of that! — a skunk!"

"Well, are you?" I asked him dryly. "Of course I'm not!" he roared. "Do I look like a skunk to you?" "Certainly you don't. I know you are not a skunk. You know you are not a skunk. So this man's saying that you are cannot change a falsehood into truth. So let him say it. In time people will get a pretty accurate idea of who the skunk really is."

So ask yourself when stinging criticism comes your way — is it true or false? If true, then, of course, you will have to be honest and admit it and correct it. But if it is not true, just remember that all the saying in the world cannot make a thing true, that isn't true.

May I cite a personal experience? A professor of theology asserted widely in the newspapers that I belonged to "the Protestant underworld." This remark was bewildering and upsetting. But I applied the scientific objective approach and asked, "Is what this man says true?" Of course, it was not. Therefore I reminded myself — saying doesn't make it so — and also recalled an old proverb: "A lie cannot run very far, for it has short legs."

A second consideration is to ask, "Who said it?" Is he someone whose opinion you respect? Is he an honest critic, or has he some purpose of his own that will be served by trying to depreciate you? An honest critic is to be respected if he is not personal or vicious. But as to the other kind — simply write him off. What he says is of no importance.

Another element in the process of siphoning off the emotional content of criticism is to take apart remarks that hurt and dispassionately study their implications. For example, I laid that strange "Protestant underworld" crack out on the laboratory table, so to speak, and meticulously examined it. "Underworld" connotes gangsters, crooks, thugs, hijackers, murderers and other unsavory characters. So the term seemed more severe than the facts indicated. While I have known Protestants who could scarcely qualify as saints, I could not recall any who rated such uncomplimentary reference as belonging to an "underworld."

Covenant Presbyterian

Church of God's promises

By MARK CLUTTER

To understand the name and purpose of Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlantic Avenue and Third Street, study the stained glass windows. They tell the story of God's Covenant with mankind.

The first window shows Noah and the rainbow. "Then God said to Noah and to his sons with him, 'Behold, I establish my covenant with you and your descendants after you . . . I set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between me and the earth.'"

The windows progress through the ringing Biblical promises to Christ reigning in Heaven and the words of Revelation: "I heard a great voice from the throne saying, 'Behold, the dwelling of God is with men. He shall dwell with thee and they shall be his people, and God himself will be with them'."

Covenant Church is at once quite old (for Long Beach) and rather new. It was dedicated in January, 1967, but it was the result of a merger of "Old First," founded in 1888 and Calvary, 1913. Actually it was more of a reunion than a merger because Calvary grew out of First.

Both churches needed new plants, but it took many years of planning to bring Covenant to reality. Old First at Sixth Street and Locust Avenue was obsolete and too small. The people began planning and raising money for a new building in 1955.

"There was some talk of moving to the suburbs as some downtown churches have done," Dr. Hugh David Burcham, Covenant pastor, said. "We're glad we didn't. Many of our members have always lived here."

First had raised money and acquired land at Seventh Street and Locust Avenue. Calvary owned the land where Covenant now stands. So the two combined their resources to build a church greater than either could have done alone.

Pastor Burcham gave some facts about the church:

"The church plant and its furnishings cost $1.6 million. It would cost much more today. It's all paid for. We had a mortgage burning a year ago."

"We have 1,200 members. Many have been with us for a long time. Any church in downtown Long Beach has many older people. We have an average of 65 to 75 funerals a year as compared to 30 to 35 weddings and 25 infant baptisms.

"But we also have very dynamic younger people. There are programs for all ages and interests."

"We Presbyterians don't like the word, but this is a kind of cathedral church. Fifty churches of the Presbytery use Covenant as a center and meeting place."

"Our theology is mid stream and main stream. We are not ultra fundamentalist. Neither are we ultra liberal."

"We believe strongly in the Council of Churches because it is an organization of people trying to do things together."

"This church works a seven-day week and often a 12-hour day."

The amount and variety of activity is shown by the weekly agenda. Sunday there will be the following events: Celebration Choir rehearsal, Children's Choir, Church School for little children, Church School for junior and senior high, member preparation class, two morning worship services, women's Bible class, adult Bible class, Committee on Social Concerns, junior and senior high fellowship, Outrigger Club, young adults.

Other days are often crowded. Seven events are scheduled for next Tuesday.

There are clubs for older and younger single people, for the elderly, for Bible study.

In addition, the church serves as a cultural center for the city, welcoming a variety of outside groups. Five major concerts are scheduled for this year. There are religious art festival, dance groups, poetry readings. "Jesus Christ, Superstar" aroused a flurry of angry comments.

Dr. Burcham has been pastor since the dedication. He was born in Long Beach and graduated from Poly High in 1934. He graduated with honors from UCLA in 1939. His major was geology!

He received his bachelor of divinity from San Francisco Theological Seminary in May, 1942, and immediately entered the Navy as a chaplain. He remained on active duty until July, 1946. He is still in the reserve and holds the rank of captain.

He received his master of sacred theology from Union Theological Semnary, New York, in 1947. He was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of divinity by Occidental College in 1960. He has held pastorates in La Canada and Oakland.

In Long Beach he has been active in civic and educational activities in addition to many church-related programs.

He is a candidate for the Long Beach Board of Education.

He is assisted by the Rev. Michael McLellan, associate pastor; the Rev. W. Theodore Allison and the Rev. Richard G. Irving, assistant pastors; Ben T. Cowles, Ph. D., counselor. The minister of music is Frank Allen. There are 20 persons on the church staff.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

How to discover God's goodness.

By seeking the spiritual meaning of the Bible, you can find new views of God's goodness and power. This discovery can bring better health, happier relationships, greater joy.

One way to find the Scriptures' spiritual meaning is through the Bible Lessons in the Christian Science Quarterly. Each week's lesson has passages from the Bible and the Christian Science textbook—Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.

You're welcome to read the Bible Lesson here, or borrow books to study at home. Stop in this week. Find out how much the Bible can mean to you.

JOBLESS RATE

proposed Thursday by Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J.

Nessen, reminded reporters that the President had recently signed legislation creating more public service jobs and said that the latest unemployment rate of 8.2 per cent, was "further reason why Congress should move faster" in approving a tax cut proposed by the President as an antirecession measure.

He said the 8.2 per cent unemployment rate for January was "within the range" the President had expected but said that Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, was still predicting a peak unemployment rate of about 8.5 per cent this year.

$20.2 billion, compared with $16 billion proposed by the President.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics announced that 930,000 workers lost their jobs in January.

The jobless rate soared past a 1958 peak of 7.5 per cent and a 1949 peak of 7.9 per cent. The last time unemployment rates exceeded 8 per cent was in 1941, a year in which the average annual rate was 9.9 per cent as the nation began to shake off the effects of the depression with the economy stimulated by war production.

Only once before since the bureau began keeping unemployment statistics has a monthly increase been higher than the full percentage point recorded between December, 1974, and January, 1975.

WHILE again prodding Congress to move "faster" on the President's economic proposals, Nessen declined specific comment on the tax cut measure approved Thursday by the House Ways and Means Committee other than to say the President "thinks his tax cut is better."

The committee bill would reduce taxes by

AFTER waves of strikes resulted in mass layoffs in the fall of 1974, the rate jumped from 6.6 per cent in September to 7.9 per cent in October, an increase of 1.3 per cent in a single month.

The new jump matched one other month, when the rate rose 1 per cent from 3.5 per cent to 4.5 per cent in December, 1953.

Calif. jobless rate swells to 9.3 pct.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's unemployment rate swelled to 9.3 per cent of the work force last month and may exceed 11 per cent sometime this year, state officials said Friday.

State employment director James Lorenz forecast a 1975 average of 10 to 10.5 per cent unemployment in the state — a much gloomier prediction than the 9.3 per cent average in Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s proposed budget.

Unemployment in Los Angeles and Orange counties followed the pattern of the rest of the nation last month, reaching its highest level in three years. The California Employment Development Department Friday blamed layoffs in manufacturing and retail areas largely for the accelerated jobless rate.

The unemployment rate in Los Angeles County increased 0.5 per cent to 8.9 per cent in January. In Orange County, the hike was 0.7 per cent to 8.1 per cent. EDD regional director Fred Brenner said 64,900 persons lost jobs in Los Angeles County last month and that a total of 293,000 were unemployed.

The majority of those discouraged job-seekers in past samplings have been women, said Robert Gordon of the University of California at Berkeley, president of the American Economic Association.

Lorenz called the figures "a stark reflection of the deepening economic recession in the nation." He said unemployment probably has increased since the survey was taken in mid-January.

tion to the federal proposal until three things happen: —A comprehensive national and regional energy policy is formulated.

—The Department of Interior submits its proposed oil development program to the affected state, regional and local agencies for review.

—Congress enacts legislation strengthening existing laws related to oil development on the outer continental shelf.

"I want to be very clear that we do not necessarily oppose the concept of development and use of the oil on the outer continental shelf," Bradley said.

"We do oppose the haste with which it is being undertaken, particularly with regard to the lack of understanding of the true value of this resource—a value which can only be determined within the context of a comprehensive national energy policy."

Bradley said an analysis of the draft EIS indicated that there had been "no careful consideration of a balanced mix of new resources," nor had consideration been given to developing such existing resources as the Elk Hills naval petroleum reserve in Central California.

"Our experts found that no analysis of the relative environmental impacts of drilling the various areas had been performed," he said.

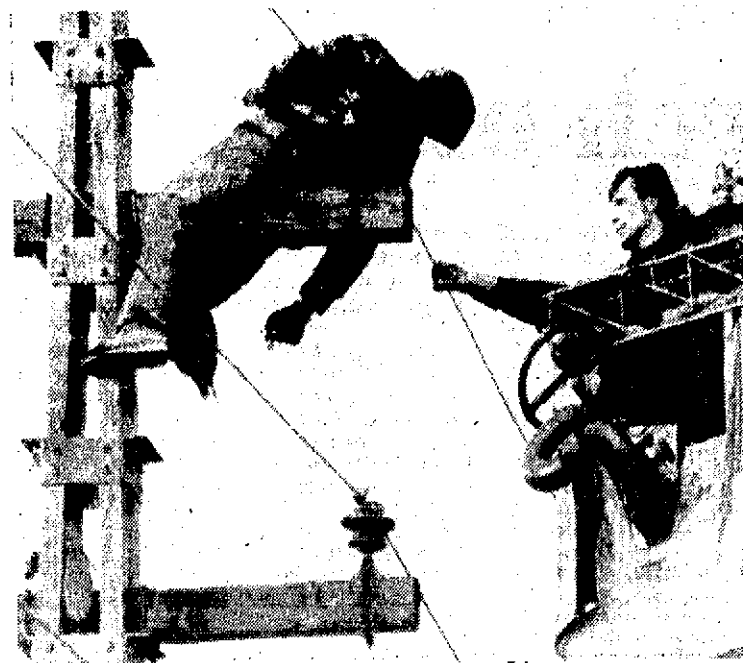

Sharp, a retired vice president of Cal Drilling, said the prevention of well blowouts.

"I submit that the draft hardly addresses itself to this at all," he said. "Only 20 pages out of 1,300 are on blowout prevention. This negligence of the primary cause of offshore pollution shows a lack of perspective."

Sharp warned that because of the sharp dropoff into deep water off the California coast most of the drilling platforms would be floating. He said floating platforms were more hazardous than stationary platforms because of their vulnerability to weather. In addition, he said on a floating platform the blowout preventers—designed to control fluctuating well pressures—must be located on the ocean floor.

Sharp suggested that drilling companies be made to "accept total liability for any and all damages resulting from their operations" and that all drilling personnel be required to be adequately trained and licensed.

"Many investigations have been made as to the cause of blowouts," he said, "and without exception the conclusions were that they were caused by human error."

Electrocuted

Fireman on rescue lift approaches body of man, identified as Christopher McCleave, 40, of Milford, N.J., found electrocuted Friday at the top of a 50-foot steel tower in New York's Queens borough. Police said an electrical charge from the 22,000-volt wire had cut off his right leg, seen at left between beams. It was theorized that the victim might have scaled the tower looking for copper wire.

Jackson in race, calls Ford economic bungler

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — In his first official appearance as a presidential candidate Sen. Henry M. Jackson accused President Ford of bungling economic recovery and not being attuned to the nation's problems.

In a speech to the Washington Press Club, the Washington State Democrat also warned Friday against "blank checks" for Southeast Asia and "fantasies of gunboat diplomacy" in the Middle East.

IT WAS Jackson's first appearance since he formally announced as a presidential candidate in a taped television show Thursday night.

In response to a question, Jackson said he did not regret his confirmation vote for Gerald Ford as vice president, but aimed some smiling but pointed barbs at the President's qualifications. "I realize that in selecting a Republican for vice president they maybe had to draw from a limited list," Jackson said. "And I believe you have to do the best you can with what is offered."

Jackson said Ford is "honorable and decent," but "does not seem to be attuned to the hardest problems facing this country, and those are the problems of energy and the economy."

Jackson said shuffling of economic advisers and statements from the White House indicate "there's no one in charge of the store."

"Considering President Ford as you would the chairman of the board, he might be accused of gross mismanagement of the economy of the business," Jackson said.

IN HIS first official campaign speech, Jackson accused the Nixon-Ford administration of favoring business and affluent taxpayers in his economic recovery proposals.

"Instead of talking about bullet biting, belt tightening and sacrifices — why don't we spell it out, frankly and honestly?" Jackson asked.

CIA-Hughes deal to raise Russ sub bared

Associated Press

The Central Intelligence Agency contracted with Howard Hughes to raise a sunken Soviet nuclear submarine from the North Atlantic, the Los Angeles Times reported Friday.

The story, which the paper said was based on reports circulating among local law enforcement officers, was denied immediately by Hughes officials.

The newspaper said the operation was attempted by the crew of a super-secret marine mining vessel owned by Hughes' Summa Corp. and designed by a Los Angeles firm. It said it was unclear whether the operation was in fact carried out.

Confidential files on the operation are believed to have been among the documents stolen by safecrackers from Summa's offices in Hollywood last June, the Times said. An estimated $60,000 was also taken.

The thieves reportedly are holding the documents and demanding a ransom one source put at $1 million. Negotiations reportedly went on for several months, but are now suspended.

Paul Reeve, head of Summa's ocean mining division, said in a telephone interview in Houston, Tex., "There is no fact behind it at all. There was no contract with the CIA." He said the Hughes CIA had never operated in the Atlantic.

Reeve said he was advised of a grand jury investigation into the burglary "but that was the first I heard of it."

The newspaper said if the operation was carried out, it likely involved one of two Soviet vessels: a nuclear-powered attack submarine of the November class which the Pentagon believes sank off Spain in April 1970 or another nuclear submarine which foundered in March 1972 about 900 miles northeast of Newfoundland.

The latter, an H2 class boat, was "designed to carry three missiles."

The Times said the Hughes ship was the Glomar Explorer, an advanced marine mining vessel still in the experimental stages. It was designed and is operated for Summa by Global Marine, Inc., of Los Angeles, and based in Long Beach.

Global Marine board chairman R. F. Bauer denied any knowledge of the reported operation. He said the vessel works only in Pacific waters.

The Los Angeles County Grand Jury is scheduled to begin an investigation into the Summa burglary and the Times said reports of the alleged extortion will be a part of that inquiry.

Former U.S. Atty. Gen. William Saxbe, FBI director Clarence Kelly and top CIA officials reportedly have conferred with Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. Joseph Busch and Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis because of possible national security ramifications of the burglary investigation.

Neither Busch nor Davis would comment on the case, but Cmdr. Peter Hagan, the police public information chief, said the grand jury investigation next week will take up the Summa safecracking.

Arabs 'blacklist' Jewish banks

By TERRY ROBARDS

LONDON—A number of major European banking houses connected with prominent Jewish families have reportedly been excluded from a series of routine international financings in recent months because of pressure from Arab governments.

High-level banking sources in London report the existence of what they call a "black list" of banking houses that the Arab governments want kept out of any financings that have Arab participants. Those on the list are said to include N. M. Rothschild & Sons, S.G. Warburg Co. and Lazard Freres.

BANKERS said Friday that the source of the list was Kuwait and Arab banks dominated by Kuwaiti interests. In addition to the Rothschild, Warburg and Lazard institutions, at least a dozen other banking houses were reported to be on the list.

The Arabs were understood to have applied pressure by refusing to participate in the financings if the Jewish-connected banking houses on the list were included in the syndicates, or fund-raising groups.

Normally, the managers of such financings would not have taken such threats seriously. But virtually all Western bankers are eager to attract Arab investment capital because of oil money flowing into the Arab countries following the quadrupling of oil prices.

nam right after negotiations opened following a recess.

STATE Department spokesman Robert Anderson denied that Kissinger wanted to resume the bombing. "The record does not support any part of Mr. Colson's statement, and I will not dignify them with any further statements," Anderson said.

The White House declined comment.

Colson also said: —The FBI once submitted to the Nixon White House intelligence reports on President John F. Kennedy compiled when he was a naval lieutenant in World War II and on Sen. George S. McGovern, whom Nixon defeated in the 1972 presidential campaign.

—Nixon was confident the Supreme Court would rule in his favor on the White House tapes but said privately seven months before that historic ruling that he would resign the presidency if the court went against him.

In other White House developments:

—Ford will carry his campaign of explaining his antirecession and energy program to the public to Texas and Kansas next week, Nessen said.

—Tuesday he will breakfast in Houston with newspaper and broadcasting executives and then fly to Kansas where in Topeka he will address a joint session of the state legislature, host a working lunch for the governors of Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin, hold an evening news conference and return to Washington about midnight.

—Ford and Pakistan's visiting prime minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, issued a joint statement saying the President agreed to increase from 100,000 tons to 400,000 tons U.S. wheat aid this year "for immediate delivery to Pakistan."

—Ford and his wife will spend the weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Western oil import 10% cut vowed

PARIS (AP) — A 10 per cent cut in crude oil imports this year has been pledged by Western oil importing countries, the president of the International Energy Agency announced Friday.

A spokesman for the agency said the cut reduced imports to 1973 levels and "means a freeze."

The reduction amounts to about two million barrels per day, agency President Etienne Davignon of Belgium told a news conference following a three-day meeting of the agency.

Davignon also reported the 16 agency members had withheld endorsement of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's plan for a minimum price on oil imports in the West in order to protect investment in alternative energy sources.

This development, coupled with hard-line positions taken by both oil producers and consumers, appeared to put in jeopardy a French-proposed conference to straighten out the world oil market.

The American delegate to the agency meeting, Thomas Enders, had said acceptance of the Kissinger plan was an "absolute precondition" for a preliminary meeting in March among oil producers, oil consumers and developing nations to set procedures for the conference.

Jordan ends skid, clips Lakewood

Bob Stephenson sank a 20-footer with four seconds remaining Friday night to give Jordan High its first Moore League triumph, a 59-57 victory over visiting Lakewood.

Jordan's win, which ended a five-game losing streak, reversed an earlier 59-55 loss to the Lakers. It also extended Lakewood's losing streak to five since beating Jordan in the league opener last month.

Glenn wins first game

Glenn fought down several Mayfair rallies to post its first Suburban League win of the season, 62-56.

Ned Kliffost scored 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to lead the Glenn attack. Freshman Mark Van Holland added 12 points and 10 caroms.

Mayfair, playing without Mike Oekiers, was paced by sophomore Rick Diffine's 14.

Glenn outscored Mayfair 17-13 in the final period to assure its first victory.

Neff outscored Artesia, 15-10, in the second period and sank 15 of 20 free throws to move into a second place tie with Gahr following a 49-46 win over Artesia.

Artesia clawed to within one point but never led.

John Spinoso led Neff with 15 and Steve McCarthy added 12. Addis Richmond led all scorers with 23.

49ers capture swimming title

Long Beach State captured the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. swimming championship last Friday night with dual wins over San Jose St. and Cal St. Fullerton.

The 49ers were led by John Stanton who won the 500 and 1000 freestyle.

U.S. gas high, but not that high

EDITOR'S NOTE: Americans face the prospect of higher fuel prices in the coming months, but motorists abroad for a long time have been paying more than $1 a gallon for gasoline. Recent events and taxes have driven prices even higher — to $1.50 or more and in the case of Argentina to $2.20 a gallon. Here is a survey of gasoline prices and fuel taxes in other countries.

By PETER MUCCINI

LONDON (AP) — Gasoline soared throughout the world last year, doubling in some cases, as motorists forked out to meet the steep increases that producing nations slapped on their petroleum exports.

A major part of the price increases comprised government taxes on gasoline aimed at forcing a cut in consumption and import costs which threw the foreign trade balance of many countries into the red.

First indications were that higher prices had led to most motorists using at least 4 per cent less gasoline. None of the governments introduced a formal rationing system, claiming it would prove administratively difficult.

But Britain was reported considering a two-tier system with a limited amount of gasoline available at a relatively low price and unlimited quantities at considerably higher prices.

GASOLINE in the United States averages 55 cents a gallon. The likelihood is for an increase.

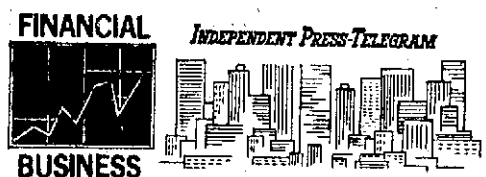

This was the situation according to an Associated Press Roundup of the world's major countries this month:

BRITAIN — Gasoline prices rose in 1974 from 38 pence (91.2 cents) an imperial gallon to 73 pence ($1.75). The imperial gallon is equal to 1.2 U.S. Gallons so in American terms it was an increase from 76 cents to $1.46.

The government tax on the old price was the equivalent of 28.8 cents. This came from an 8 per cent government sales tax. In November the government increased this to 25 per cent an additional revenue tax of 22.5 per cent was imposed. The Energy Department said gasoline consumption dropped about 4 per cent from January to November 1974 from 2.27 billion gallons to 2.19 billion gallons.

The government was recently reported considering a two-tier price system whereby each motorist would get from 8 to 10 imperial gallons a month — about half the average consumption — at 50 pence ($1.20) a gallon. Supplies beyond this amount would cost the equivalent of $2.40 for a U.S. gallon.

SOVIET UNION — Soviet gasoline prices have stayed the same for the last few years and because of the pricing system there is no way of knowing how much is tax. There is no sign of the Soviets trying to cut consumption. A gallon of 93-octane gasoline, the highest grade available to Soviet citizens, costs 51 cents a U.S. gallon and 95-octane, available to Westerners only, 60 cents. The octane level of premium gasoline in Western countries is 99.

Industry Week

Economy due for move up

CLEVELAND. — An upward turn in the nation's economy is still in the picture for 1975, Industry Week reported Friday.

The decline that has been under way in the economy should halt. Even a slight increase in business activity may take place. By the end of 1975, real economic growth should be well on its way to recovery, the magazine for managers said.

The economy nosedived sharply in the fourth quarter of 1974 when the gross national product (measured in 1958 dollars) fell at an annual rate of 9.1 per cent. A further decline of about half the size is expected in the current quarter.

THE RECENT economic proposals by President Ford are likely to have only a negligible effect on the overall pattern of business this year, Industry Week asserted. Tax rebates, specifically, could make the business recovery a little stronger than it might otherwise be, but improvement probably would occur without them, the magazine said.

The danger some economists see is that the President's latest proposals could reactivate inflation late this year or early in 1976. Signs are growing that, for now, inflation is ebbing. While the fourth quarter of 1974 registered a whopping 13.7% annual rate of price increase, it's expected that the first data for 1975 will show a marked reduction in the rate of increase.

Even though there may be a recovery in the economy, 1975's real gross national product (adjusted to remove effects of inflation) will be down from that of last year.

The drop in the wholesale price index in December was probably the best economic news of 1974, Industry Week said. It showed that the back of inflation was finally being broken.

AS A RESULT, the outlook for price changes in 1975 has improved considerably. Where price indexes rose as much as 11 points in a quarter last year, rates of increase should slow down in 1975 to 3 or 4 points (maybe even 1 point) per quarter.

In the early part of 1975, consumer prices most likely will continue to reflect the large wholesale price increases that occurred in 1974, but the rate of increase in consumer prices will wind down, the magazine forecast.

Production rates, on the other hand, will suffer in 1975. Cutbacks in late 1974 are harbingers of a slow pace for at least the early part of 1975. Slight improvement should come in the second half, but production lines will be considerably cooler throughout the year than they were in 1974. Durable goods production is expected to be down about 6 per cent from last year, while nondurables output should fall about 4%.

While reduced production will hurt the employment rolls, the big jumps in the unemployment rate are past. Further increases in unemployment will most likely be at a slower rate, Industry Week said.

WEST GERMANY — Gasoline prices in 1974 fluctuated between $1.14 per U.S. gallon at the beginning of the year to a current $1.25. Consumption is also varied from a reduction of 9 per cent in early 1974 compared with the previous year to a net increase of 2 per cent at the end of the year. But West German motorists bought more regular gasoline. In 1973 premium grades formed 60 per cent of sales but by the end of 1974 this figure had dropped to 58 per cent. Oil companies predicted that 1973 consumption figures would not be reached again until 1980.

FRANCE — French gasoline prices rose from 1.25 francs a liter to 1.83 francs. At the current exchange rate this is equivalent to an increase from $1.25 to $1.70 per U.S. gallon. A gasoline tax of 57.1 per cent, in operation for several years, had little effect on consumption but the general price increase led to a cut in consumption of about 3.5 per cent. Annual consumption increases previously averaged 8.5 per cent, so that 1974 reduced consumption was about 12 per cent in real terms. French motorists also bought more regular gasoline with sales in 1974 rising 22.9 per cent compared with a 4 per cent drop in 1973.

ITALY — The price of a liter of gasoline shot up from 180 lire in late 1973 to 300 lire by the end of 1974. This is the equivalent of an increase from $1. to $1.80 per U.S. gallon. The gasoline tax rose from 70 cents to $1.20 a gallon, believed to be the highest in Europe. The higher cost cut consumption by 8.4 per cent compared with 1973. The reduction was also partly due to a ban on Sunday driving early in 1974.

BELGIUM — Prices rose from 11.74 francs a liter for premium grade in late 1973 to 14.10 francs this month — from $1.30 to $1.56 per U.S. gallon. There was also a tax increase amounting to the equivalent of 90 cents to 94 cents per U.S. gallon. Annual gasoline consumption in Belgium formerly rose by an average of up to 10 per cent a year. In 1974 consumption fell by about 7 per cent, a total cut of 15 per cent in real terms.

DENMARK — Since January 1974 gasoline prices rose from $1.37 to the current level of $1.48 per U.S. gallon. A government sales tax of 13 per cent and a gasoline tax of long standing amounting to 41 per cent are included in the price. Gasoline consumption in 1974 was 10 per cent down on 1973. Government experts attributed the decline to higher gasoline costs, introduction of speed limits and a temporary car registration tax which raised the price of autos by 25 per cent and reduced sales by 35 per cent. This surcharge ended in January and car sales are now picking up again.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA — Gasoline prices rose last April 1 from an equivalent of about 91 cents per U.S. gallon to $1.62 for regular grades and from $1.13 to $1.89 for premium.

SPAIN — Gasoline prices rose from the equivalent of 96 cents to $1.33 a U.S. gallon in September 1974 and have remained unchanged. Higher prices failed to cut consumption which rose by 1 per cent in 1974. The tax on gasoline also remained unchanged at 41 cents a gallon. Spanish authorities said gasoline formed 2 per cent of the country's total oil consumption and they expected a 1 per cent increase in the use of gasoline during 1975.

HUNGARY — Gasoline prices went up Sept. 1 by 40 per cent to an equivalent of $1.22 a U.S. gallon of premium grade.

JAPAN — Prices more than doubled since 1973 but despite this, the cut in consumption came to only 2.4 per cent last year. The Japanese situation, however, is different from most other countries as the bulk of motoring is done for business purposes. The price of regular gasoline is $1.44 per U.S. gallon compared with 67 cents in 1973. The gasoline tax was raised last April from 35 cents a gallon to 42 cents. The government is considering a further increase to cut consumption as part of an over-all plan which has included closing most filling stations on Sundays.

ARGENTINA — The government raised gasoline prices by up to 45 per cent Feb. 1 to $1.98 a U.S. gallon for regular and $2.20 for premium grades. Argentina is about 75 per cent self-sufficient in crude oil production but a long-term government program aims at reducing dependence on traditional fuels and converting to hydroelectric, natural gas and nuclear energy. About 55 per cent of the gasoline price goes to the government in tax. Consumption dropped enough in 1974 for driving restrictions to be eased, but the government has not disclosed the amount of the saving.

Business updates

cost $200 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — American businesses would have to spend $200 billion to modernize fully their operations, according to economists at McGraw-Hill, Inc.

Its January survey of capital spending plans led the economists to report: "A significant share of the plants and equipment is ancient, of obsolete design and incapable of attaining the efficiency made possible by modern production techniques."

Inflation has driven up modernization costs along with everything else.

THE INDUSTRIES said to be furthest behind in updating facilities were: Railroad equipment manufacturing, shipbuilding, rubber and iron and steel.

IT'S HARD TO TELL what this apparition is, but to engineers at Litton Industries' Data System Division in Van Nuys it is a 20-times-enlarged master art work of an electronic micro-miniature integrated circuit element used in one of the firm's defense systems.

What recession-wealthy ask?

By VERNON SCOTT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Wealthy citizens around here have not seriously altered their lifestyles to cope with the economic recession, which is working hardships on the poor and pinching the pocketbooks of the middle class.

They still have a lot of money and high incomes.

True, they have lost in the stock market. Many investments have cost them paper profits and their business machinations may be reduced.

But for families earning upward of $50,000 annually (well-to-do) on up to those earning in the hundreds of thousands of dollars (the rich), the squeeze has not progressed from office to home.

There have been no slackening of shiny new luxury automobiles in the two-car garages, no fewer choice-cut steaks on the barbecue, no reduction in spending.

ONE WEALTHY Beverly Hills manufacturer, asked how the recession has affected his family, said, laughing, "We've asked the servants to cut down on the pilferage."

Marvin Hime, a Beverly Hills jeweler, shrugged. "Business is as good or better than it has been in the past 10 years. No complaints."

San Francisco attorney Jack Miller planned to ski in Switzerland again this year as he has for many years past. He continues to entertain at his suburban home and to commute the 50 miles in his Mercedes-Benz.

Unlike the Wall Street crash of 1929 when millionaires were diving out of buildings and wealthy men were reduced to selling apples on street corners, today's big rich have not put all their eggs in one basket.

"Smart people learned from the past," said one

San Fernando Valley businessman who earns in the neighborhood of $100,000 yearly. "I've got real estate holdings, some municipal bonds, common stock, cash and other investments."

"My wife tells me prices are way up at the supermarket and in the better department stores. But I can absorb that. I don't even have to think about it."

REAL ESTATE is still selling briskly in the enclaves of Bel Air, Brentwood, Holmby Hills and Bel Air.

Real estate broker Mike Silverman said, "Homes selling for a quarter of a million bucks and more are holding their price. The only difference we notice is there are more properties for sale than usual. Prices haven't dropped."

Department store parking lots are considerably less full than they were this time last year in the San Fernando Valley and most other suburbs. But not in the expensive ($1.50 an hour) lots surrounding the chic boutiques and smart shops in Beverly Hills.

Nor do plastic surgeons specializing in cosmetic surgery find a dearth of patients. One doctor is scheduling his operations as far as April.

THE RICH of show business are carrying on as if the economy were still booming along in the 1960s. Parties are as frequent and lavish.

Fancy restaurants aren't prospering as they were because they have lost the patronage of marginal customers. The big rich continue to pour champagne in town and fly or drive to Palm Springs for weekends or jet to Sun Valley or Aspen for a week's skiing. What fuel crisis?

The wealthy find it unnecessary to cope with the recession because there is no need — yet.

Dr. Mayuga heading conservation group

A voluntary program for oil and gas conservation in California oil fields will be headed by Dr. M. N. Mayuga, assistant director of the Department of Oil Properties for the city of Long Beach.

Mayuga was elected chairman of the Conservation Committee of California Oil Producers for a one-year term. The committee is composed of chairmen and vice chairmen from the state's 33 oil-producing districts.

Supported by companies producing 92 per cent of the state's total crude production, the committee acts as a clearing house for information for the industry and government.

Increasing oil and gas recovery is one of its major objectives. Dr. Mayuga was born in the Philippines and received a Ph.D. in geology from the University of Arizona. A retired colonel in the Air Force Reserve, he has served in several executive positions on the city's oil staff, working closely on the Wilmington Oil Field land subsidence

Big week for movie lovers

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Movie lovers are going to appreciate their TV sets more than usual the next several days.

Tonight, the tube brings us a repeat of "Cool Hand Luke," starring Paul Newman, and two theatrical films that will be airing on television for the first time: "Frenzy" and "Easy Rider."

All three of these movies drew high praise from at least some of the critics.

"Frenzy," produced in London in 1972, is Alfred Hitchcock's latest suspense thriller, and is the story of a psychopathic rapist-murderer. The British cast is headed by Jon Finch, Alec McCowen, Barry Foster, Anna Massey, Barbara Leigh-Hunt and Vivien Merchant.

Nine minutes of the most gruesome moments have been deleted for television, but ABC still plans to make an announcement to the effect that the movie may not be suitable for all members of the family.

"Frenzy" airs from 9 to 11:15 p.m. on Channel 7, and "Easy Rider" comes on the same station at 11:45. The latter, which also includes violence, stars Peter Fonda, Dennis Hopper, Jack Nicholson, Luana Anders and Karen Black in a tale of motorcycle-riding hippies. "Cool Hand Luke," in which George Kennedy won an Oscar as best supporting actor, is on Channel 4 from 9 to 11:30.

"AIRPORT," which attracted the largest audience ever to see a movie on television — after being a boxoffice hit at the theaters — returns to the tube Sunday night from 7:30 to 10:30 on Channel 7.

The drama about airliner passengers periled by a bomber stars Burt Lancaster, Dean Martin, George Kennedy, Helen Hayes, Jean Seberg, Jacqueline Bisset, Van Heflin and Maureen Stapleton.

"Cold Sweat," a 1971 French-Italian crime melodrama starring Charles Bronson, Liv Ullmann and James Mason, will make its TV debut Monday night on Channel 4, and "Summer of '42," starring Gary Grimes and Jennifer O'Neill, and "The Last Day," a Western starring Richard Widmark, will air a week from tonight on Channels 7 and 4, respectively.

FROM MONDAY through Friday night, six new TV movies of more than ordinary interest will be coming our way. They are:

— "The Legend of

DISASTER FILM MANIA

KNXT film critic David Sheehan will look at "The Disaster Movie Mania" in a half-hour special to air next Friday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Lizzie Borden," starring Elizabeth Montgomery as the accused ax murderer of her parents, on Channel 7 Monday night.

— "Sarah T. . . Portrait of a Teen-age Alcoholic," starring Linda Blair of "The Exorcist" fame, on Channel 4 Tuesday night.

— "The Trial of Chaplain Jensen," starring James Franciscus as the Navy chaplain court-martialed on charges of adultery, Tuesday night on Channel 7.

— "A Cry for Help," starring Robert Culp as a radio talk-show host who gets a suicide-threat call from a young girl, on Channel 7 Wednesday night.

— "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," starring Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning in a drama of middle-aged romance, on Channel 2 Thursday night.

— "Adventures of the Queen," starring Robert Stack as captain of an ocean liner facing a bomb threat, on Channel 2 Friday night.

CELEBRITIES from politics, sports and entertainment will participate in the third annual National Leukemia Radiothon, a 24-hour fundraising broadcast, this weekend, beginning at 5 p.m. today.

The radiothon will be carried on stations coast-to-coast. In the Los Angeles-Long Beach area, it will be broadcast on KFI (640), KGIL (1260) and

Queen Mary businesses' earnings below 1973

By RALPH HIMMAN JR.
Staff Writer

A performance study for businesses aboard the city-owned Queen Mary shows that that 1974 earnings for most tenants dropped below 1973 levels.

In the survey, which included the nonprofit Museum of the Sea, and was prepared by the city's Queen Mary supervisory department, there were two plus marks.

Shipboard hotel facilities, leased from the city by Pacific Southwest Airlines, but managed under contract by the Hyatt House group since last May, turned in the highest earnings report. Revenues were up 46.6 per cent in the last six months of 1974, in comparison with the same, pre-changeover period of 1973. Figures for the two years: $1,599,854 and $817,080, respectively.

Also on the plus side of the ledger were four eating facilities operated by Specialty/Queen Mary Corp., a subsidiary of Long Beach-based Specialty Restaurant Corp. An overall 36.68 per cent increase in gross receipts was achieved by the four, whose volume went from $2,318,991 in 1973 to $3,169,586 last year.

The fourth restaurant, the Captain Room, actually opened for business in September 1973, made a distinct contribution to total earnings.

SQM's other culinary operations, fast food and banquet catering, show diminished earnings, however. Fast foods — from sandwich and refreshment kiosks spotted around the ship, went down 34.7 per cent, from $382,234 to $249,472. Seven per cent fewer banquet patrons were served and gross income was off 10.48 per cent, from $1.8 million to $1.6 million.

Specialty/Queen Mary Corp. masterleases all commercial space from the city and, in turn, sublets areas for shops and other commercial ventures to private business people. Rents paid by merchants vary according to formulas based on each business' volume.

In 1974, with about 40 shops, total revenues fell an overall 4.6 per cent, or $122,252 below 1973.

Then total sales reached $2,633,429.

Mary's Gate Village, a specialty-item shopping center built on city land adjacent to the Queen Mary, brought gross revenues of $306,295 to its developers, SQM. Opened in mid-1974 with 49 shops available, there were 14 occupied at year's end.

Excluding the village, SQM's total gross receipts from these and all other shipboard activities in which it is involved, declined 4.3 per cent — from $8,135,476 to $7,788,218.

Attendance and revenues similarly fell at the nonprofit sea museum, the city study shows. Numbers of patrons dropped 273,144, from 968,797 to 695,653, for a 28.19 per cent loss. Revenues dipped $786,057 or 24 per cent, from $3.2 million to $2.4 million. Admission prices went up during the two-year period.

The city-operated parking lot usually is considered to provide the most reliable source attendance data. Statistically speaking, 2-and-a-fraction persons are assumed to arrive in each auto, for which a flat $1 parking charge is made.

Between 1973 and 1974, parking receipts dropped 11.15 per cent, from $437,630 to $388,796. This could mean that some 150,000 fewer people toured the Queen Mary in 1974, the year America's fuel, inflationary and recessionary problems became acute.

100 profs go back to school

The Department of Motor Vehicles requires all drivers to take exams before renewing their licenses.

Many professionals, such as nurses, must periodically return to school to update their training.

State university professors should also occasionally update their teaching skills, even though there's no law that says they have to, says the head of the Faculty Development Center at Long Beach State University.

"The idea that a Ph.D. is a passport to permanent professional security can get us in trouble," said Dr. Jim Robinson, who directs the center's two-year-old program.

"There are new technological teaching tools to learn about," he said. "And almost every teacher can improve his basic teaching ability."

Last year, more than 50 LBSU professors gave up their Friday nights to do just that.

This year Robinson expects more than 100 professors to attend eight sessions aimed at updating teaching skills.

The faculty development program will help develop new teaching techniques, and participating teachers can have videotapes made of their teaching and get criticism from other faculty members.

'Postman Jim'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

For the past three years, even the most routine letters have become "special deliveries" for the residents of a quiet, tree-lined neighborhood in Long Beach.

But residents say there'll be something missing in today's mail delivery. And waiting for the mail won't be the high point of the day that it used to be.

The something missing, homeowners say, is "Postman Jim," whose smiles and friendly chatter have trademarked him as more than just a mailman.

So Friday, the neighbors in the area—some 30 or more of them—got together to give their departing mailman a surprise "specialness party," complete with cards, gifts and a gold cardboard crown.

Guest of honor was Postman Jim Robbins, 50, who has walked the route from Virginia Road to Cedar Avenue and from Country Club Drive to Bixby Road since October 1971.

But after 21 years as a mail carrier, Jim's legs tire more easily than they used to, so he bid for—and won—a shorter route in North Long Beach.

"He told us Wednesday that he was leaving, that Friday would be his last day on the route," said Frances Park, who spearheaded the impromptu party for Robbins and his wife, Gladys.

Also in attendance at the party was Wendy, a black and tan German shepherd, who Robbins said has followed him faithfully on his daily rounds. "She waits for me on the corner, and as soon as she sees my truck, that old tail starts wagging," the postman said.

"I love these people, I hate to leave them, but I have to think of my health," the letter carrier added. "I know I'll miss them all."

Yes

Bogus food stamps flourishing?

No

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

The question of whether the business of counterfeiting food stamps is on the rise or not seems to be up in the air.

A Federal Public Defender, whose job it is to defend people charged with the crime, says, "Yes," but the Agent in Charge of the Secret Service, whose function is to arrest those people, says, "No."

Both are convincing.

"In the last year or so," says Deputy Federal Public Defender Alexander M. Loebig Jr., "one out of five counterfeit cases I have handled have involved food stamps. 'It didn't used to be that high.'"

On the other hand, "We don't have any problem with food stamps," says Robert E. Powis, Special Agent in Charge of the Los Angeles branch office U.S. Secret Service. "In the last year we have had only two cases involving counterfeit food stamps."

"One was an Orange County case in which a million dollars worth was seized before any had been passed and the other was a South Los Angeles case in which $500,000 worth was passed and another $600,000 worth was confiscated."

"That's it."

The two men work out of almost adjacent offices on the seventh floor of the United States Court House at 312 N. Spring St.

Loebig, who is just one of a number of public defenders working out of the federal court house, talks about "a huge black market" in food stamps and says counterfeiting them is growing "more and more popular."

Just how popular probably lies somewhere between his opinion and that of Powis.

"Because of the state of the economy," Loebig says convincingly, "more and more people are becoming eligible to get food stamps, so there are more and more of them in circulation."

"The more common they become the easier it is to pass counterfeit ones and the more attractive it becomes to would-be counterfeiters."

The soft-spoken attorney points out that counterfeiting can appear pretty attractive to man who owns a printing establishment because of the "terrific competition" in the business.

If a printer gets into debt and appears heading for bankruptcy "printing up a few bills or stamps" can look "like an easy solution" to his problems.

"If he does it once and gets away with it," Loebig says, "he usually will try it again. Eventually, though, he almost always gets caught."

There are several advantages to counterfeiting food stamps over money, according to Loebig.

First, although they can only be passed at groceries and markets, they are usually not scrutinized as closely as bills are.

"Food stamps are accepted rather nonchalantly most of the time," he says. The "mark up" for counterfeit food stamps is usually the same as for counterfeit money—10 per cent.

In other words, a person who counterfeited a million dollars in food stamps would expect to sell them to a "wholesaler" for $100,000.

That's exactly what two Orange County men in the case Powis spoke of expected to do last fall. The only problem was that the "wholesaler" they contacted happened to be one of Powis' Secret Service agents.

Both men, of course, went to jail.

So did six suspects in the South Los Angeles case.

The penalty, like the "mark up," is the same for food stamps as it is for money—up to 15 years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine.

Hardly seems worth it, does it? "If a guy's in debt far enough," Loebig opines, "it seems to."

R.E. POWIS, Secret Service agent, says bogus food stamps are no problem.

A.M. IOEBIG JR., public defender, says counterfeiting food stamps has increased.

Betting on human nature

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

"Andy" Andriole, the bail bondsman, sits in his office across the street from the Long Beach police station with nothing between his business and spiraling inflation but human nature.

Andy's is one of three bail outfits that have for years dominated the block. They are the first things you see when you walk out of the local jailhouse.

Today is Andy's "anniversary." He will have been in the business exactly 28 years, 20 of them with his own firm. Over those years, Andy's developed his own theories on human nature, theories he depends on to keep his business intact.

He can't raise his prices. Merchants can do that to keep pace with the burgeoning cost of almost everything, and bankers can adjust their interest rates, but there is no adjustment for bail bondsmen.

The courts set their own bail schedules, schedules that decree the bond for drunk driving will be $315.50, and they set equally specific amounts for other crimes. Those dictate the bondsman's profit, for he gets 10 per cent of each bond he writes.

Police departments issue more "O.R." releases—own recognizance, or free—now and most of the people who get them would have been customers just a few years ago.

"That cost us 90 per cent" of cases that had been the "backbone of the business," the drunk drivers and persons charged with other misdemeanors, he says. "I bet we don't write two petty thefts a month any more."

Too, California last year tried to copy a couple of other states which have virtually eliminated the bail business by having defendants pay a cash deposit, partly refundable after the defendant's case is finished.

The bail bondsmen fought it here, seeing the program as another form of government encroachment on private enterprise's domain, and won.

So how does a bail bondsman keep the wolves from the door, especially in tough times? By knowing human nature and operating with caution, according to Andy.

The drunk drivers, says Andy, are among the most likely to skip bail. They're afraid of losing their drivers' licenses. Defendants in drug cases are also among the least reliable. Sometimes they get "loaded" and forget when they're due in court.

When someone skips on their bail—it happens about 7 per cent of the time—the bondsman must crack down. "Say your bail is $315," says Andy. "If you skip bail on us, rather than pay the court, we'd prefer to pay an investigator $315 to pick you up and throw you back in jail."

But there are lots of defendants Andy hardly worries about at all.

Take persons charged with homosexual offenses. "I've been a bondsman 28 years and I've never lost a penny on 'em. They are the most honest people. Their word is their bond."

"And bookmakers. They always show."

I,P-T journalism awards

The Independent, Press-Telegram has won first place for the best youth interest coverage and second place awards in two other categories of the 1974 California Newspaper Publishers Association contest, judges said Friday.

The top prize edition, which ran May 1, was supervised by Judy Hazlett and composed of stories written by journalism students from Poly High School and edited by Paula Perren.

In the best sports coverage category the I,P-T section edited by John Dixon won second place. It was the second consecutive year that the sports department placed high in the contest, having won first prize in the same category in the 1973 contest.

A second prize for the best series of editorials was awarded for a series which dealt with the wage dispute between policemen and the city of Long Beach.

Course on 'Future' opens

A college course aimed at helping people adapt to the rapidly changing future is being offered by the Continuing Education Office of Long Beach State University.

Dr. Al Hamel of the college's education school said the course will examine topics ranging from technological to moral changes that futurists believe will be coming in the next few decades.

The class meets on six Fridays and Saturdays throughout the spring. It began this weekend but students can join the class at any time, Hamel said. Fee for the course is $20 for two weekends.

Manson followers move to be closer to prison

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Two of Charles Manson's women followers have moved to Sacramento so they can be closer to Folsom Prison, where Manson is held, a state prosecutor says.

"That's one reason," conceded Sandra Good, 30, who is living in an attic apartment in an old downtown boarding house with Lynette Fromme, 26, another Manson girl.

Both are remembered for their long vigils outside the Los Angeles Hall of Justice where Manson and three other women followers were tried and convicted for the 1969 Sharon Tate murders.

The X's carved in their foreheads in dedication to Manson have left scars that are still visible on Miss Good and Miss Fromme, who moved here six months ago.

"They're waiting for their god to be set free and 20 miles from their god is better than a couple of thousand," said Vincent Bugliosi, the former Los Angeles County deputy district attorney who successfully prosecuted Manson.

"To my knowledge they still think he's Christ," he added in a telephone interview.

The two women have been denied permission to visit or correspond with Manson. A spokesman at the Department of Corrections said the pair come in at least once a month "to talk about how Manson is doing."

Miss Fromme, who has been arrested twice on murder charges that were later dropped, was mysterious in what little she would say to a reporter.

"We have something going between us and the people over there," she said, pointing toward the state capitol, only blocks away.

She was asked if she meant the Legislature or the corrections department.

"The answer is in the problem and if these people want to play around with their psychologists and people of different stations who don't know anything about the problem you're not going to get anywhere. You have to go to the problem. Charles has got the answer," she said.

Burglars no match for petite coed, 17

BRAWLEY (AP) — Karen Kaiser is 17 and weighs a little under 100 pounds, but burglars beware.

The Imperial Valley College freshman drove home in time to see two men starting to leave in a car loaded with her family goods. Quickly, Karen blocked the driveway with her van.

The burglars' car crashed into her. She rammed right back, forcing their car onto the lawn.

Then she ran to the car, grabbed the ignition key and got her father's pistol from the house.

When the men refused to surrender Thursday, she shot once into the air. When they still refused, she fired into the dirt nearby one of them.

The pair, under Karen's orders, carried the goods back into the house, but one of them later escaped on foot, ignoring her shots.

Sweepstakes winner held in tax case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man who won $128,410 in the 1973 Irish Sweepstakes will stand trial in federal court on income tax evasion charges on March 17 — St. Patrick's Day.

The trial date was set Friday for Frank L. McNulty, 59, of Oakland, after he pleaded to the charges before U.S. District Court Judge Spencer Williams.

His attorney failed to get the $100,000 bail reduced, and McNulty remained in custody.

He was indicted Jan. 29 and arrested the same day by special agents of the Internal Revenue Service.

McNulty, who is unemployed, is accused of attempting to evade $35,014 in federal income taxes by failing to file a tax return for 1973 when he had a taxable income of $122,660.

McNulty has said his winnings have been deposited overseas, either in Ireland or a Swiss bank.

Carter, Boulez at Music Center

By DAVID LEVINSON

Two of the shaping forces in the music of our day were represented at Thursday's Music Center concert of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. One — Elliott Carter — was on the program. The other — Pierre Boulez — was on the podium.

Carter's importance as an influence on American composers during the past 25 years can hardly be exaggerated. Carter's role is comparable to the influence Richard Wagner exerted on the music of Europe a century ago. And Wagner was as powerful a force — among those who hated his work as much as among those who adored it — as the history of music has known.

BOULEZ' music, too, has had a profound impact on musicians, and perhaps on even more musicians than have been affected by Carter. Boulez is also the first composer since Gustav Mahler to become a star conductor — and with the same orchestra, the New York Philharmonic — and I imagine his star status brought more people to Thursday's concert than the presence of Carter's 1969 Concerto for Orchestra, which was greeted with hostile silence by many in the audience and with only the politest of applause by most of the others.

The program was a venture in education of the sort only Boulez seems able to get way with (and even in New York and Paris his success in such matters is apparently far from total). The program opened with the Carter, went on to Carl Maria von Weber's Concerto No. 2 in E-flat major and concluded with Beethoven's Symphony No. 4. Not a crowd-pleaser on the list.

THAT WEBER'S concerto came closest to being a hit tells you something about Boulez' refusal to pander to popular tastes in this opening concert of his scheduled two weeks with the Los Angeles Philharmonic. The concerto is so dated that when Ernest Hutcheson wrote his monumental The Literature of the Piano in 1948 he dismissed it as belonging "to a bygone period."

"We may pass over it in favor of the Concertstueck in F minor," Hutcheson said. But Boulez is fond of searches in the nooks and crannies of orchestral literature. While many musicians dig out works like the Weber to play for their own amusement, Boulez is one of the few who polish performances of curiosities and present them to the public.

Sometimes an audience receives this the way a man receives a bone a dog has dug up, brought in and carefully laid at its master's feet. The recipient is grateful for the attention, but is unable to work up the enthusiasm the donor seems to expect.

IN THE CASE of the Weber, the enthusiasm was moderate to warm. The work has a second movement of some charm, and the cello solo

Weather satellite hovers over Pacific

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The nation's newest weather satellite stationed itself 22,300 miles above the Pacific Ocean Friday after ground controllers successfully fired onboard rockets to maneuver the spacecraft into exact orbit.

Vet's wife keeps him in hospital

MARTINEZ (UPI) — When Veterans Administration Hospital authorities tried to send an 80-year-old World War I veteran home his wife refused to answer the door.

Alfred Carlson's family believes he is too sick to be taken care of at home. VA authorities say there is nothing more they can do for him.

THE OLD Army veteran was brought home to nearby El Cerrito by ambulance. Attendants banged on the door, and when his wife refused to come to the door, they took him back to the hospital.

Mrs. Carlson is also elderly and in poor health, and is now extremely upset, according to a relative who said "this is really shaking her."

The retired longshoreman, who was a member of the U.S. Army's expeditionary force to Siberia during World War I, still was in the hospital Friday, listed in "satisfactory" condition and awaiting an administrative decision on what was to be done with him.

"WE ARE not dumping anybody," said hospital Administrator Wallace Koseluk. "We try to handle every patient individually and our medical staff unanimously agreed Mr. Carlson had received all that could be done for him in an acute medical facility. His family says no."

The old army veteran suffers "multiple illnesses" connected with old age and he has cancer, Koseluk said.

"He could live three months, he could live a year," said Carlson's physician, Dr. Howard Grossman.

Dive under train ends transient's life

SAN LUIS OBISPO (UPI) — A transient apparently committed suicide Friday by throwing himself under a slow-moving northbound freight train.

The coroner's office said the victim possibly was a former employee of the railroad. He was decapitated.

Identification was withheld pending notification of relatives.

Big on Elvis

Mrs. Jeanette Erickson, 37, founder of the Elvis Presley Flaming Star Fan Club in Seattle, says she's been in love with the singing star since she was 16 and "there's nothing I wouldn't do for Elvis." Surrounded in her home by more than 1,000 photos of the rock-and-roll star, Jeanette says she hopes to save $500 from babysitting to take a trip to Las Vegas next month to see Presley perform. In 1973 she pawned her wedding rings to see him in the desert spa and the rings are still in hock. At that time she met her idol in person and she was "shaking like a leaf" when he bent over to kiss her.

industry with shades of "Phantom of the Opera" and Faust. (PG)

AIRPORT '75 — Inspired by "Airport," a suspense drama involving a crippled 747 airliner. With Charlton Heston, Karen Black, and Gloria Swanson. (PG)

GODFATHER II — A stunning sequel. Robert DeNiro (outstanding) as the hoarse-voiced young Sicilian who becomes the crime family Godfather in early 1900s New York, and Al Pacino as the dangerously troubled heir overlord. With Lee Strasberg and Robert Duvall. (R)

THE GAMBLER — Critics choice for dynamic study of the species and a fine performance by James Caan as the leading character. (R)

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Plants suffer when they're smothered by too much soil around their trunks. The tips of the new branches and leaf buds dry out and the branch ends slowly die. The plants grow painfully slow as if crippled by arthritis. They bloom, yes, but sparsely with fewer inferior blossoms. The weakest branches gradually die, finally the whole plant dies. A soft-wood plant naturally would die sooner, whereas hard wood type of plants such as camellias take much longer period of time.

Palm trees are a hardy group of plants tolerating considerable amount of heat and some cold. Yet, they too suffer when the trunks are buried too deep in the soil.

A STUNTED cocos palm tree in a lawn was buried nearly a foot deep. The trunk base was much thicker than normal. We dug down till the shovel hit the topmost roots. That excess soil was dug away from the trunk at the top roots area. Enough soil was spread over the roots to cover them. That lower area should have been level with the surrounding lawn, when the tree was planted.

Gardener should always be sure that the shrub or tree top level of the plant root ball must be level with the surrounding ground, before the prepared soil is filled and firmed well around the root ball sides on up to the level ground. A ring of soil like a circular dam is built up at the edge where the plant hold was dug to retain the water when the plant is watered.

Later as the plant develops, the dam soil is removed so it doesn't gradually crumble down into the basin and cover the plant trunk. A circular furrow several inches deep farther out from the tree trunk provides area to irrigate the plant.

SOMETIMES an occasional plant already is too deep in the container when purchased. A good gardener scrapes his finger into the soil around the trunk to see if soil already is smothering it. Loose soil is scraped off to be sure plant isn't set deeper than the natural root ball surface.

Now, be prepared for a surprise that will prove out what we're talking about. There's a department store that had camellias planted along one side of the building

CLUB NOTES

The South Coast Cactus and Succulent Society will meet Sunday, at 1:30 p.m. at South Coast Botanic Gardens, 26701 Rolling Hills Road, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Virginia Martin will speak on Lithops, African succulents which generally grow in dry areas and almost completely underground. The program will consist of slides, culture tips and an exhibition of plants.

The South Bay Fuchsias Society will participate in a lecture program at 1 p.m. today at the South Coast Botanic Garden Foundation, Inc., clubhouse, 26701 Rolling Hills Road, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

The Long Beach Garden Club, Inc., member of the Costa Verde District of the National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc., promises to make available by Feb. 19 a schedule for its standard flower show April 10 and 11.

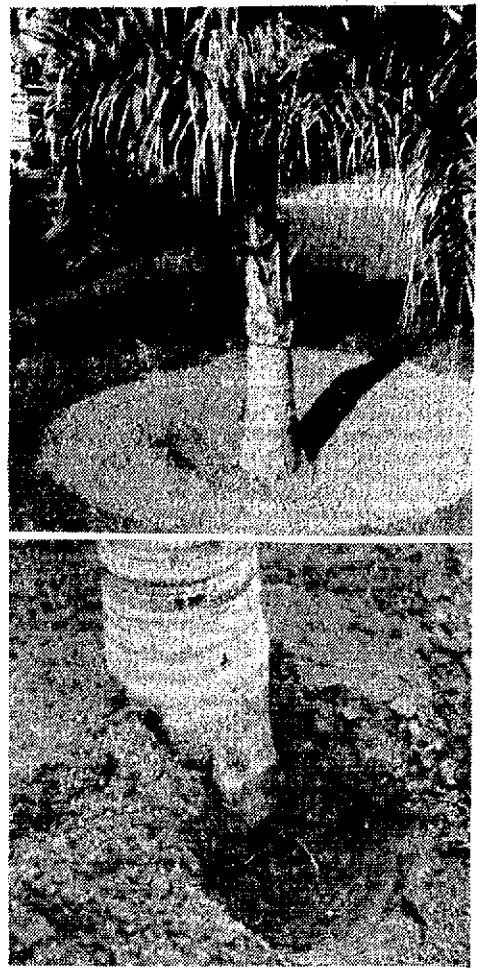

This year's show theme will be "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." It will be held at the Unitarian Church, 5450 Atherton. Public participation is invited.

The Long Beach-Lake-wood Bromeliad Study Group will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Savings and Loan Association, 3901 Atlantic Ave. The group will be involved in two shows this spring.

The Naples Islands Garden Club will meet Monday at 1 p.m. at Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in Naples. Guest speaker will be Charles Lee, an authority on the art of bonsai.

The Long Beach Parent Chapter of the American Begonia Society will meet Sunday at 1:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Glendale Savings and Loan Building, 555 E. Stearns St.

The Bellflower African Violet Society will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Unified School District teacher's lounge, Laurel Street at Clark Avenue.

COCOS PALM... buried too deep between the sidewalk and the building wall. Right now, they're not higher than three feet even though planted 17 years ago!

The reason? They were planted too deep. It's too bad the horticultural teachers don't know about that planting so they could take their students, show them the plants to prove they must not set the plants any deeper into the ground than the top of the plant root ball level with the surrounding soil level.

From camellias let's discuss spurge that vicious weed, with dark, green, red spotted leaves, whose stems branch profusely form prostrate mats from six inches to well over a foot diameter size. The sprawling weeds smother dichondra and cause the areas to look sickly and even die out.

SEVERAL professional gardener friends believe that February is an ideal month to attack the future weeds in a dichondra lawn by applying a pre-emerge herbicide that sterilizes-kills the weed seed so they won't sprout.

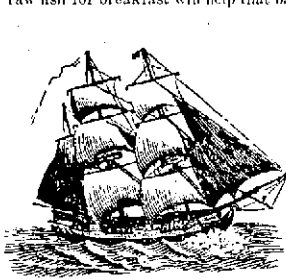

The herbicide they use not only attacks the vicious spurge seeds, but a whole host of many other small types of broad but small size leaf weeds, as well as a number of blade type weeds seeds too. Several dichondra turf fertilizers available, to contain the pre-emerge herbicide, as well as a post-emerge herbicide that attack the single yellow-flowered 'creeping oxalis, too.

State has some wealthy chiefs, disclosures show

By EVANS WITT

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California has some wealthy state officials and some who aren't quite so wealthy — like Gov. Brown, state documents revealed Friday.

Brown and all other elected state and local officials had to reveal their investments and real estate holdings in the first disclosure filings required by California's tough new Political Practices Act.

THE FILINGS by Brown and several constitutional state officials showed little significant change in their holdings since September, when the last disclosure papers were filed in 1974.

Brown listed his $70,000 Laurel Canyon home in Los Angeles, an Israeli state bond worth less than $10,000 and his lease on the $250-a-month state-owned apartment in Sacramento as his only assets.

On the other hand, several state legislators and Treasurer Jesse Unruh listed considerable investments in forms filled out to meet Prop. 9 requirements.

State Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Los Angeles, listed stock investments in 30 corporations, each investment valued at less than $10,000. Among the 30 are Pabst, Campbell Soup and Transamerica Corp.

Sen. Albert Rodda holds stock in 23 corporations, including AT&T, Pacific Gas & Electric, Southern California Edison, Standard Oil of California and Phillips Petroleum.

NEWLY elected Sen. Newton Russell, R-Tujunga, also listed 23 stocks holdings. Those included General Motors, Shell,

GOV. BROWN Doesn't Own Much

Union Oil, Kodak and Texaco.

Sen. Randolph Collier, the dean of the Legislature from Yreka, listed one major investment — his holdings in the Siskiyou County Title Company worth more than $100,000.

Unruh, the Democratic state official, listed investments in numerous firms, many of which are not well known — Datatab of New York City, NRG Inc. of Phoenix and Texstar Corp., for example.

He also listed several pieces of real estate, including ownership of the Spring Oaks Ranch in Fallbrook, worth more than $100,000.

Secretary of State March Fong Eu listed fairly substantial stock holdings, but the disclosure documents showed she had changed her holdings somewhat since September.

FOR EXAMPLE, Ms. Eu apparently sold her holdings in Ford Motor Co. and First Builders

Bancorp of Newport Beach.

But not all state officials who filed indicated major investments or real estate holdings.

Assemblyman Howard Berman, the Democratic floor leader from Los Angeles, listed no assets worth more than $1,000 and no real estate holdings worth more than $1,000.

Prop. 9 requires that all elected government officials file the statements within 30 days of taking office. For the new state officials, that meant by midnight Thursday.

Under the old disclosure law, the officials also had to list sources of income.

For example, Brown formerly listed his salary as secretary of state and interest income from a savings account in Los Angeles. But under Prop. 9, which Brown helped write and supported vigorously in the June primary, such filings are not required this year.

FILINGS in 1976 and thereafter will require disclosure of all sources of income — including interest on savings accounts, for example.

Some other legislators included:

— Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, who listed his personal assets as two pieces of real estate in the city, one of which was valued at more than $10,000.

— Republican Sen. Milton Marks listed 16 stock holdings, including one in Crocker Bank worth more than $10,000, while Sen. George Moscone listed only one stock holding worth less than $10,000. Both are running for mayor of San Francisco.

New food boss bars 2 named to Cal. milk price hike Board of Education

Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The new state director of food and agriculture Friday denied an 8-cent per gallon increase in minimum milk prices sought by the dairy industry.

Luther "Tim" Wallace, appointed by Gov. Brown earlier this week, cited "the excessive and increasing supply of milk," declining feed prices and increases in federal milk price supports as reasons for his action.

It was the first such denial of a dairy industry request for higher milk prices since July, 1972. Dairy men had sought the increase to keep pace with inflation. The statewide average price of milk now is 71 cents per half gallon.

"We are cognizant of how much inflation hurts both the producer through high production and overhead costs, and the consumer through higher food prices, particularly low to moderate income families," Wallace said.

Although he said he could not grant an increase "at this time," Wallace said it was not a "once-and-for-all decision" and could be reviewed later.

The action came on the heels of an auditor general's report charging the Department of Food and Agriculture made a $55 million mistake to the benefit of dairymen when it granted the last milk price hike April 1, 1974.

WALLACE did not mention the report in his statement Friday but earlier had called it a "slur" on the department's reputation.

Dairymen reacted to Wallace's action with "a frustrated sort of anger," said Curt Miller, an economist for the League of California Milk Producers.

Rodda will battle efforts to oust Buddhist chaplain

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The appointment of a Buddhist chaplain for the state Senate has stirred a controversy, but the Rev. Shoko Masunaga doesn't have to worry about his job.

"I am determined to do anything possible to retain the present chaplain," said Sen. Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, in an interview this week. "I believe this is a very important issue."

By tradition, the senator from Sacramento has the prerogative of naming a chaplain from the local clergy.

Rodda, a Methodist and grandson of a Methodist minister, has in 16 years in office named the first Oriental, the first black, and the first Greek Orthodox chaplains.

HE SAYS he wants to appoint a Chicano in the future. "And a woman minister is on my agenda, too, if I'm around long enough."

Many of the protests Rodda has received stemmed from an editorial in the California Southern Baptist magazine. Written by the Rev. Jack Johnson, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in El Monte, it said:

"In a day when so few things remain sacred...we see still another of the eternal truths being trampled...the existence of one God," he wrote.

He added that "there is no justification for an idol worshiper serving as Senate chaplain."

The Northern California Japanese Christian Church Federation said that Johnson's reference to "idol worshiper" revealed "he is uninformed about the nature of Buddhism and even more unfortunately, he exhibits a spirit of religious intolerance."

RODDA HAS received mail pro and con.

"If you were really a Christian...you couldn't have, in all honesty and decency, appointed a man who is a nonbeliever," said one correspondent.

"Hang in there, Sen.

Rodda. Don't let the Baptists wear you down," wrote another.

"How can the business of the Senate be run morally proper without the Lord's help?" asked one.

"Recognize the complaints for what they are: a bigoted response from the Orange County lunatic fringe," advised another.

Masunaga, 58, was born in Sacramento but studied for the priesthood in Japan. He is rinban (presiding minister) of the Buddhist Church of Sacramento, whose congregation of 2,000 is fourth largest in the United States.

He has taken the flap over his appointment to the $412-a-month ceremonial job in stride.

"I try to bring in not only Buddhism but the very best of Oriental sayings from different religions," he told the Sacramento Bee.

"The senators have been very friendly and very good," he said. "They have been understanding."
